OUT-OF-TOWN AGENTS IMPORTED FOR FORAY

20 Places Are Visited on Night of Al Smith's Nomination.

TIME CHOSEN CALLED MERELY COINCIDENCE

Tuttle First Hears About Seizure Next Day in Newspapers.

Seventeenth of a series of articles by the former prohibition administrator of the Eastern New York district.

MAJ. MAURICE CAMPBELL

The twenty night club raids of June 28, 1928, the night Al Smith was nominated, have been commonly and erroneously called the Willebrandt raids.

The obtaining of evidence and the raiding was all done under my direction and on my own initiative, with out-of-town investigators lent to me by Commissioner Doran.

The coincidence with Al Smith's nomination was a coincidence and nothing more. I might have raided sooner, but wanted to have my civil service appointment before I faced hostile sentiment in New York. And the timing of these raids was too ticklish a matter to be influenced by anything but necessity.

Mrs. Willebrandt did give me valuable assistance and support, for which I was most grateful. I conferred with her several times before the raids. She personally came to New York and arranged to have a Federal judge instead of a United States Commissioner sign the search warrants, because I had found that word of search warrants sometimes leaked out. She gave me special prosecutors who did what I considered to be the only effective prosecution my enforcement efforts ever got.

Promised Full Support.

Mrs. Willebrandt told my enforcement assistant, William D. Moss, that she wanted to get behind me fully in this matter because she felt that I had not been supported by United States Attorney Tuttle in the Helen Morgan case, of which I told yesterday. Moss reported to me that she said she particularly wanted to make amends for this. As a matter of fact, after my clash with Tuttle, she had suggested that I make a new Helen Morgan case. At one time she intended to prosecute the cases herself, but she was unable to do so.

The prosecutions in these 20 cases against 98 defendants resulted in fines totaling $18,660; forfeitures of $4,000; actual jail time totaling 125 months and 10 days; suspended jail time totaling 138 months; probation totaling 59 and one-half years. Out of 18 defendants who stood trial, 15 were convicted.

The credit for this prosecution goes to Norman J. Morrison and Leslie Salter, the special assistant attorneys general assigned from Washington. Mr. Tuttle prosecuted the first case, against the Ferndale Club (it was the only prohibition case I ever knew him to take part in, but he insisted on it as his right) and obtained convictions. But his office balanced the effect of this when Robert B. Watts, his assistant, was held to have given immunity to the chief defendant in another case; so in that there was no conviction.

Got Night Club Reputation.

It would have been no use trying to use my own men for an undercover investigation of the night clubs. The first man I selected was James L. White, from Denver, who was attached to the Detroit office. He came with his wife and registered at the Hotel Astor, cashed checks on Denver, got himself into a newspaper as a big broom-corn man from Denver. He soon learned his way around the night clubs; and, though he knew he was being watched and

GARBER IS REFUSED PLACE ON BALLOTS

Putnam, of Tenth Virginia District, Also Ruled Off by Judge's Decision.

FAILED TO GIVE NOTICE

Richmond, Va., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Circuit Judge Julien Gunn, of Richmond, today denied and dismissed the applications of Representative Jacob A. Garber and M. J. Putnam for a writ of mandamus requiring their names to be placed on the November election ballots as congressional candidates in the Seventh and Tenth districts, respectively.

Judge Gunn overruled the contention of the complainants that the Virginia election law requiring convention nominees to give 60 days' notice of their candidacies is merely directory, unreasonable or unconstitutional. Instead, he held, the law is mandatory, reasonable and does not conflict with either the States or Federal constitutionals.

Mr. Garber and Mr. Putnam appealed to the court after Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth, ruled them ineligible to have their names placed on the November election ballots. They failed to give Secretary Saunders the 60 days' notice prior to the date of election required by law.

Mr. Garber previously has said that in event of an adverse decision from Judge Gunn he would appeal to the Supreme Court of Appeal of Virginia.

Chicago Invites Hearst To Honorary Reception

Chicago, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—William Randolph Hearst has been invited to come to Chicago for a reception and entertainment in his honor in a resolution passed by the city council.

The resolution was introduced by Alderman Oscar F. Nelson, Republican floor leader of the council, who declared that "no American citizen has done more to safeguard freedom of the press than Mr. Hearst and no man has done more to keep the United States out of foreign entanglements."

Wichita, Kans., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Art Davis, of Lansing, Mich., third in elapsed time, led the Ford reliability tour into Wichita today, landing at the Municipal Airport at 4:19 p. m. (C. S. T.). He was followed by Myron E. Zeller, of Detroit, at 4:22 p. m. and George Haldeman, of Newcastle, Del., at 4:25. Strong cross winds delayed the fliers between here and Garden City.

PLAY-OFFS OF TIES HALTED BY DARKNESS

McCarthy and Sweetser May Earn Places in Extra-Hole Tests Today.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

Merion Cricket Club, Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Continuing his unbroken march of triumph for the year, Bobby Jones today captured the qualifying medal in the national amateur golf championship with a record—equaling the score of 69,73—142, in a battle that witnessed the downfall of the defending champion, Harrison R. ("Jimmy") Johnston, of St. Paul, and produced unprecedented carnage among other favorites.

Pitch darkness finally overtook and halted the hectic struggle over the historic east course of Merion after Jones emerged the victor by a single stroke over George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, who finished the two-day 36-hole test with 73, 70—143; after Johnston had been eliminated by a single shot, despite a gallant comeback, as he scored 83, 73—156; and after no less than eleven players, with scores of 155, had started but failed to complete a play-off battle for the eight places remaining in the list of 32 qualifiers for match play, starting tomorrow.

Johnston's tragic failure to earn the right to defend his crown at match play marked the second time in the 34-year history of the national amateur tournament that a champion had not qualified.

Gardner Failed in 1909.

"Robert A. ('Bob') Gardner, of Chicago, after capturing his first championship in 1909, was not among the qualifiers for the defense of his crown in 1910, when William C. Fownes, of Pittsburgh, was the winner."

Seventeen years ago Jerome T. Travers was forced to play off to enter the man-to-man struggle and he went on to win the title, but Johnston just missed even this opportunity as he saw what looked like a safe total surpassed by an eleventh-hour outburst of low scoring among a flock of unheralded competitors.

So sensational were the upsets that cluttered up the premises throughout the last half of the qualifying round, participated in by more than 160 players, that three of the first ten seeded entries and seven of the first twenty favored names were abruptly removed from the tournament.

Six former American title holders, including Johnston, Jesse Guilford, Chick Evans, Chandler Egan, Davidson Herron and Mar Marston, were eliminated, along with the big British star, Cyril J. H. Tolley. Another former American and British champion, Jess Sweetser, was among the half-dozen who must continue the play-off tomorrow to decide the occupants of the five remaining places in the draw.

Moe Fails to Qualify.

Such stalwarts as Donald K. Moe, of Portland, Oreg., Walker Cup ace; Frank Dolp, also of Portland, and a former Western amateur champion;

Says: Oftentimes leisure can be profitably employed. While there are some people out of work who are well educated, there are many others who were displaced because they were not sufficiently trained to hold their places. When the time comes to reduce the force, those go first who can not compete with their more skilled fellow workmen. As our industrial life becomes more complex and requires more and more technical knowledge, it will be increasingly difficult for the unskilled to find and hold employment. High wages require a high earning capacity.

With the present school facilities for the young this situation will come to take care of itself. But the condition would be very serious for those who have already reached maturity without such advantages, except for the opportunity that is afforded by the night schools and university extension.

These are practically free, and correspondence school courses cost but little. Our people will find not only their present earning capacity but their chance of future permanent employment greatly increased by serious application to some of these sources for intellectual training. The main value of a wage earner is his mind.

300 PER CENT RATE SET IN WATCH LOAN

LEGAL CURB IS SOUGHT

By DANIEL B. MAHER.

If there were some elixir of life to animate the statue of Benjamin Franklin at Tenth and D streets northwest, the old philosopher would be shocked to see upon what unfertile ground his axioms of thrift have fallen.

Nearby the old sage is the place where the pawn brokers, under the guise of second-hand dealers, ply their trade of taking jewelry as security for loans, and do as they please about returning the pledge.

There might be slight consolation to Old Benjamin, whose teachings were the synthesis of thrift, to know that the dealings are carried on behind his back; but District authorities soon hope to terminate them by having legislation enacted to permit the return of pawn brokers.

To test the manner in which these pawn brokers operate a reporter made a canvass of dealers, trying to "hock" his watch, or rather the gold timepiece which was purchased by the office for the occasion, the reporter having not reached that state of affluence which affords ownership of such valuables.

The purpose of the visit was to determine whether these merchants really bought a piece of jewelry or whether they follow the same procedure as a licensed pawn dealer. There are no licensed brokers in the District.

Max Zweig, of 937 D street northwest, was the first merchant whose place was visited. In the window was a sign, "Drastic reductions on all revolvers. Our line of shotguns is complete. Look 'em over."

The clerk at this place probably noticed that the patron was in need of money and offered to lend him $4 on the watch and promised him it could be redeemed within ten days for $5 or at the rate of 900 per cent interest a year.

This didn't seem such a good bargain, so Tendler's at 913 D street, a few doors away, was next visited. Here the offer was a little better. The client was offered $6. After ten days it could be redeemed at $6.50. If it remained a month interest of $1 would be charged and 50 cents for each additional month. No business on this deal.

For the sake of variety Ninth street was next visited. At 414 Ninth street the prospective patron was told that the proprietor conducted a place at 434 Ninth street, where money would be lent on jewelry.

While at 414 Ninth street an enterprising young salesman sought to interest the patron in some old socks and old hats. Since the reporter had several pairs of old socks and one

DIARY HIDES SECRET OF ANDREE'S DEATH

EXAMINE OTHER PAPERS

Stockholm, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The final chapter of the tragic story of Salomon August Andree and his two companions is believed to have been written by Andree himself shortly before they died on White Island a third of a century ago. But it is in writing that thus far has defied deciphering.

Three Swedish professors who have been examining the relics of the balloon expedition that met with ill luck over the frozen wastes in 1897, today declared that a mouldering document to which they refer as "Andree's second diary," probably recites what another Andree diary already published has left untold. The "first diary" carried the story up to October 2, 1897, when a sudden break-up of the ice floe on which the explorers were encamped shattered their prospects of returning to civilization. How they landed on White Island remained a mystery and there has been no suggestion as to the immediate cause of death. The experts will endeavor to decipher the document known as the second diary, although they have some fear that the meaning of its writing may remain hidden forever.

An inventory of all the documents found in the encampment of the Andress expedition was announced today by the committee of three professors.

The documents in addition to the second diary, which have been examined by Professors Lithberg, Gunnar Anderson and Ahlmann, are:

Salomon August Andree's own diary covering the period from July 11 to October 2, 1897, the resume of which has already been published.

Notes and an almanac that had belonged to Nils Strindberg, one of Andree's two companions, containing short sporadical notes made between July 11 and October 10, 1897, with two pages full of observations during the period between July 11 and 19, 41 pages of short notations made between July 11 and 15, and also some short notes which have not yet been transcribed.

The logbook kept by Strindberg between July 15 and September 4, consisting of 120 written pages in octavo, containing chiefly astronomical observations; also the end of a little book containing menus and similar data.

Another logbook by Strindberg for the period between September 5 and October 2 consisting of 14 written pages containing astronomical observations, some figures, and at the end nine pages referring to the time between July 21 and 31 in shorthand that has not been deciphered.

GRAIN MARKET CRASHES UNDER FALSE REPORTS

SEARCH FOR AUTHOR OF MESSAGES BEGUN

TRADE BOARD STARTS INVESTIGATION TODAY

Specific Information Given by Hyde; Fish Opens Quiz Monday.

Chicago, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Already confounded by short-selling investigations and unmeetable world competition by Russia, the sagging grain market today bent further under the weight of false reports from Canada.

Hastily denied and corrected, the reports, which alleged insolvency of the Canadian Growers' pool, nevertheless sent wheat, corn and every other grain tumbling to unimagined lows, unmatched in 24 years. September wheat reached bottom at 77⅞ cents.

The incident added a third investigation to the market. The business conduct committee of the Board of Trade and the United States grain futures administration began immediate inquiry to find the author of the forged messages. They were signed with the name of a prominent Winnipeg broker. A telegraph company joined the search.

Board Inquiry Today.

The board of trade committee tomorrow will reopen its investigation into Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde's charges that Russia abused grain hedging facilities here to depress wheat prices. The committee has received the specific information it requested Hyde to furnish.

Representative Hamilton Fish, who said he suspected a Communist plot behind the short selling of wheat by Russia, will bring, his congressional investigation to Chicago next Monday. Officials of the Board of Trade have promised to appear and several brokers, it is understood, will be subpenaed.

Russia's activities abroad continued confounding to the local situation. The Soviets undersold North American wheat in Europe and announced vessels had been chartered to carry out 55,000,000 bushels of grain, most of it wheat.

Further bearish news was that the world's stock of wheat in sight increased 27,322,000 bushels last week, bringing the total to the staggering figure of 413,343,000 bushels. Last year at this time the world's visible supply was 393,493,000 bushels.

Hyde Held Mistaken.

The Hyde charges against Russian participation in the local market continued to furnish gossip for traders. It was said by some of them that Hyde's statement to the effect Russia could "obviously not import wheat over our 42-cent tariff" was not pertinent to short selling on the Chicago market, inasmuch as it would be possible for Russia to hedge here as insurance against transactions abroad.

The world prices of wheat remain at joint levels on all markets for the most part, considering the differences caused by freight and insurance, they argued.

Still others defending the legality of the Russian transactions pointed to the Grain Stabilization Corporation's holding of 60,000,000 bushels of wheat

OFFICIAL KILLS RAILWAY HEAD AND ENDS LIFE

Lower—DUDLEY G. GRAY.

VICE PRESIDENT THEN FIRES INTO OWN BODY

BYERS AND GRAY RIFT HAD BEEN OBSERVED

"That's Obvious," Is Reply of Dying Executive, Asked Who Did Shooting.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Behind the locked doors of his office, Maxwell C. Byers, president of the Western Maryland Railway Co., was shot and killed today by Dudley G. Gray, vice president in charge of traffic, who then fatally wounded himself.

At odds for months, the two men engaged in a quiet conversation shortly before noon, their voices not being heard by stenographers and other employes through a partition that separates the president's offices from a general office in a downtown building.

Then came a burst of firing, and an employe who forced his way into the room found Byers dead and Gray dying. He succumbed after 4½ hours at the nearby Mercy Hospital. Coroner Otto M. Reinhardt gave a verdict of murder by Gray and suicide. He said no inquest would be held.

Gray died with but two cryptic words of explanation. Asked by the clerk first in the room "who did this?" he muttered:

"That's obvious."

Byers Shot Eight Times.

By his side was found a .32-caliber automatic pistol, with five bullets unexploded. At the hospital a similar weapon, with one bullet, was taken from Gray's clothing.

Byers was shot eight times, once through the heart. Gray was shot twice, a bullet near his heart causing his death at Mercy Hospital this afternoon.

Three minutes before the startled office workers heard the shots, J. W. Stringer, a special representative of the railroad president, walked out of the president's office shortly after Gray was announced and came in, he said.

He said the two started to converse quietly and seemed on the most amiable terms.

Controlled by B. & O.

Byers, who was 52 years old, became a prominent railroad figure in 1922 and again in 1925 when he adopted an uncompromising attitude toward striking shopmen and engineers of his road.

He was a native of Pittsburgh and is survived by his widow and five sons.

Byers had been president of the Western Maryland, which derives much of its revenue as a coal carrier from the fields of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, since 1920. He had also been chairman of the board since 1926.

The road operates 877 miles of trackage, 543 of which are owned outright. It is controlled by the Baltimore & Ohio, but under the consolidation plan of the Interstate Commerce Commission would be a part of the Wabash-Seaboard Air Line system.

Had Noticed Antagonism.

Gray, born at Columbus, Ohio, in 1869, had been connected with the Western Maryland since 1913. His widow, who was Catherine Gertrude Leonard, was reported to be visiting at Columbus today. Mrs. Byers arrived at the hospital soon after the shooting and collapsed when told her husband was dead.

The two men had been associated even before their service with the

LOSS ELIMINATES ROBINS

Baker Bowl, Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Connie Mack and his Athletics looked over the St. Louis Cardinals as they played the Phillies here this afternoon, and left Baker Bowl somewhat confused as to whether they must play baseball or cricket in the world series.

When the two teams finally drew wickets in the mellow September sunset, the Cardinals had pasted out 26 hits for a 19 to 16 victory, and increased their lead to three full games over the idle Cubs. It gave them four out of five for the series. The victory also eliminated the Robins, who bowed to the Giants, 8-2.

The Cards started off by running up an 11 to 0 lead off Fidgety Phil Collins and Elliott, and the Phils retaliated by hammering out eight runs off Rhem and knocking him from the box.

Tony Rensa gave them their first bunch of tallies by hitting a home run into the left field bleachers with the bases full in the fourth.

The Cardinals piled up more runs off Benge and the Phils finished up Lindsey in the seventh. They had three runs in, the bases full and none out in that inning when Bill Hallahan marched in and retired the side on two easy pop flies and a strike out.

He was socked for five runs in the Reno, Nev., Sept. 23.—The Reno Gazette says today that a young woman with flaming red hair, introduced as Clara Bow, motion picture actress, played roulette and other games of chance for high stakes at a resort at Calneva, Nev., last week and gave checks aggregating $13,500 to cover her losses. The management of the resort said the checks had been returned marked "payment stopped." George B. Thatcher, member of a Reno firm acting for the resort owners, said he had laid the matter before B. P. Schulberg, of the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Studios at Hollywood.

There were four checks, according to the attorney, dated September 11.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Capt. Western Maryland. When Byers was a division engineer with the Baltimore & Ohio in 1904, Gray was a division freight agent for the same road.

Baltimore bankers and others who knew both men said that for months there had been a noticeable and growing antagonism between them. Minor railroad officials said they had had several stormy conferences in recent months.

Police were told in recent weeks they had been at odds over litigation in which the Western Maryland was involved.

Replies "That's Obvious."

Four hours after the shooting had thrown the railroad offices into confusion and had brought police and ambulances to the scene, an official police report of the known circumstances wrought some order out of the welter of rumors and theories.

Charles E. Belt, working in the outer office, dashed into a corridor that separates this from the president's office as the last shot was fired, the report said. The door to Byers' office was locked, and Belt, peering through a bullet hole, saw Gray trying to rise.

Forcing the door he found Byers on his back dead and Gray, several feet away bleeding. By Gray lay a .32-caliber pistol, and this, Belt said, he picked up and placed in a drawer in Byers' desk. Then he asked Gray who did the shooting.

"That's obvious," was the muttered reply.

When Patrolman Walter E. Koehler, who sprinted up the stairs from a street corner, arrived, he found Belt trying to give Gray water from a paper cup. Gray was rushed to the hospital for an emergency operation. Oygen failed to revive him.

Gray Seemed Calm.

Koehler said the pistol found on the floor was filled, five cartridges being intact. On the floor he picked up ten empty shells. Police said Gray obviously had refilled this weapon before trying to take his own life. They were unable to account readily for the condition of the weapon found later in Gray's pocket.

William F. Stoffer, an employe, told police Gray seemed calm when he entered Byer's office. He said Gray was carrying a large bundle of papers.

From other employes, members of the State's attorney's staff learned that Byers and Gray had disagreed at nearly every director's and operating conference they had attended recently.

They said Byers had overruled Gray on several occasions and that Gray appeared to resent this.

Detectives asked each employe who said he saw Gray enter Byers' office:

"Did Mr. Gray appear mentally unbalanced?" The reply in each case was negative.

Omaha, Nebr., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Maxwell C. Byers, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, who was shot and killed in a pistol fray at Baltimore today, formerly was assistant to Carl R. Gray of Omaha, president of the Union Pacific Railroad, while the latter was president of the Western Maryland prior to 1920.

Gray said that there is no relationship between himself and Dudley G. Gray, vice president of the Western Maryland road, who also was fatally wounded.

PROHIBITION CASES FILL COURT DOCKET

DEPUTY SHERIFF NAMED

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

The Fairfax County Circuit Court disposed of a number of prohibition cases yesterday. Almon Dodson and William Riggins pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a still and were fined $5 and costs and given a six months jail sentence each. They will surrender to the court on October 1 to begin serving their sentences.

Selmer Hill pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor and was fined $100 and costs and given a suspended jail sentence of one month. He was also required to give a bond of $500 not to violate the State prohibition law for a period of one year. T. P. Johnson pleaded guilty to possession of intoxicating liquor and was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to one month in jail. Sentence was suspended during his good behavior. H. L. Threadcraft pleaded guilty to indictments charging transportation and possession of liquor and to driving while under influence of liquor. He was fined $50 and costs and 30 days suspended jail sentence on the first charge and $100 and costs and one month suspended jail sentence on the second charge.

Dominic Falone, of Washington, was tried by jury yesterday for driving while under influence of liquor. He was found guilty and fined $100 and costs and 30 days in jail. Counsel for defense moved that the court set aside the verdict because of statements made by the prosecution which had a tendency, it was claimed, to prejudice the minds of the jury in reference to nonresidents of the State. His motion for a new trial is being considered by Judge Walter McCarthy, who will rule on the motion Friday.

Robert Lewis, colored, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with the felonious shooting of Mable Perry, colored, with a shotgun. He was sentenced to serve four years in the state penitentiary.

Cases against Albert Redmond, Irving Denis, G. C. Wayland Clarence Wilkins, Forrest Nickols, Joe King, John Riggins, C. R. Harper and Rex Lowen, alias Rex Lowery charged with violation of the state prohibition law, were continued until the first day of the next term of court.

George P. McCann, of Accotink, was appointed deputy sheriff on motion of Sheriff Eppa P. Kirby. Carl R. McIntosh, of Chesterbrook, was reappointed special policemen for the county for a period of one year, and required to give a bond of $1,000.

G. E. Vandermark was appointed trustee of the Falls Church Lodge Number 11 I. O. O. F. for a five-year term to succeed R. E. Kendrick, whose term has expired.

Lonnie Troutman, 23 years old of New Alexandria, was arrested by County Policeman Lewis L. Finks for driving while under influence of liquor and colliding with a car of George L. Walker of Clarendon on the Lee-Jackson highway near Annandale. George A. Washington, colored, of Alexandria, was injured in the accident.

State Prohibition Inspector Virgil Williams and Sheriff E. P. Kirby, accompanied by Deputies Henry T. Magarity and Paul Herman, raided the McKeever home at Dunn Loring, where they arrested Ralph McKeever, William McKeever and Roy Sorg. They were taken before Justice of the Peace Thomas P. Chapman, at Fairfax, who held them for action of the grand jury at the November term of the circuit court. Ralph was charged with transportation of liquor and disorderly conduct. William was held for transportation and possession of liquor. Sorg was charged with being drunk and disorderly. One gallon of alleged liquor was seized by the officers.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Franklin Sherman School, at McLean, will hold its first meeting of the school term today. The principal, Gordon E. Smith, will speak of his summer's work at Columbia University and outline school plans for the year. Miss D. Hibbs will give a report of the Parent-Teacher Association course given at the University of Virginia this summer.

The association's executive committee has organized with the following appointments by the president, Mrs. I. B. Faidley: Mrs. Thomas Corner, program chairman; Mrs. W. E. PADDING IS CHARGED BY G.O.P. IN COUNTY

CAPITAL PERSONS LINKED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 23.—Charging that the registration lists of voters in Anne Arundel County have been padded at the instance of Democrats, a group of local Republicans, with an official detailed from State headquarters of that party, today began a thorough investigation of the books.

Joseph M. Armstrong, Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, candidate for State senator, and Whallam Claude, candidate for State's attorney, are the prime movers in the action which has been instituted not only in behalf of the local G. O. P. ticket but also for Mayor William F. Broening of Baltimore, the party's candidate for governor, and the rest of the State ticket, Ernest F. Fadum, of Baltimore, came here today by direction of the State central committee to assist in the investigation.

The Republicans a few days ago filed a petition for permission to go over the books. At first the Democratic board of supervisors of elections declined to surrender their custody, but upon advice of counsel finally consented.

The claim is that the Democratic leaders have placed on the books some several hundred voters, mostly persons from Washington and Baltimore, who pass the summer season on the river shores. The Second District is pointed out as a particular instance of the alleged padding. Herald Harbor, on the Severn, colonized mostly by Washingtonians, is in that section, and it is asserted that a large number of residents of the Nation's Capital are on the county registration lists.

The Republicans plan to go over the books of every voting precinct in the county carefully and to bring formal challenge of all suspects.

BROTHER OF NAVY'S "FATHER" HONORED

INCLOSED IN BIG STONE

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 23.—The historic St. George's Churchyard here, where rest the remains of Col. John Dandridge, father-in-law of George Washington, and of many early inhabitants of Fredericksburg, was the scene this afternoon of impressive ceremonies in connection with the dedication of a granite stone marking the site of the headstone placed in 1774 by John Paul Jones, "father of the American Navy," over the grave of his brother, William Paul. The old headstone is set in the new for preservation.

The exercises marked the 151st anniversary of the battle between Jones' flagship, the Bon Homme Richard, and the British vessels off the British coast September 23, 1779.

Family History Related.

Miss Jacqueline Smith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. Mason Smith, of Fredericksburg, a granddaughter of Thomas Jefferson and twelfth in line of descent from Pocahontas, unveiled the monument. The remainder of the ceremonies were carried out in the Sunday school room of the church because of the extreme heat and threatening skies which later gave way to rain.

George P. Coleman, Mayor of Williamsburg and chairman of the Virginia committee of the George Washington Foundation, delivered the principal address in which he told of the connection with Fredericksburg of the great naval commander and his humble brother. He gave a brief history of their lives in this country, to which they migrated from Scotland. William, the elder of the two was a tailor and preceded John Paul, who later took the name of Jones, by many years.

Others Making Addresses.

Others speaking were James H. Callender, of New York, author and relative of the Paul family, who with Thomas Cochran, his cousin, also of New York, and the Naval History Societ was responsible for the erection of the stone; Robertson Paul, of Charleston, S. C., a relative of the Pauls, Col. James Barnes, President of the Naval historic Society and Mayor Jere M. H. Willis, of Fredericksburg.

Dr. J. N. Barney, of Fredericksburg presided at the exercises and the Rev. Dudley Boogher, rector of the Old Church, pronounced the invocation and benediction.

John T. Goolrick, Fredericksburg newspaperman, first called attention to the fact that the original headstone was crumbling into decay.

Judge Balks on Jailing Boys Under Jones Law

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 23.—Federal Judge W. E. Baker, conducting the September term of court here, yesterday demurred at sending two 17-year-old Morgan County youths, W. Woodrow Fleet and George Fields, who pleaded guilty to violations of the Jones law, to jail because of the danger of being thrown into association there with what he described as a low type of criminal. He intimated that he would send them to Chillicothe, Ohio, where they might be trained in a useful work until they have completed their sentences.

No jury trials have been necessary in Federal Court so far this term, all criminal cases, most of them involving liquor violations, having resulted in pleas of guilty.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS CUT

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 23.—The revival of industrial activities has been accomplished here without ceremony but with considerable effect, according to a brief survey which has been completed by the chamber of commerce.

It is reported that Charlottesville industries which were running part time are now running at capacity, and a number of them reported that there has been no let-up in their business during the depression.

Interviews by Verbon E. Kemp, executive secretary of the chamber, with a number of industrial leaders revealed that unfilled orders are mounting to an excess over the usual demands of the season and that employment is being increased from 20 to 40 per cent.

Reports from individual industries showed that the Henderson-Ervin Co., underwear manufacturers, are now increasing their normal capacity by 40 per cent and that experienced workers are being employed as rapidly as applications are received.

The Albermarle Weaving Co., manufacturers of draperies, has started a night shift and expects to increase employment to full night and day capacity within the next month.

The firm of Frank Ix & Sons, weaver of silks and crepes, is employing its full complement of 172 workers and is operating every warp and loom night and day.

The S. & R. Silk Mills have been running at full night and day capacity throughout the depression period and announce that from present indications this condition will be indefinitely maintained.

The Charlottesville Woolen Mills, oldest local industry, has continued its capacity production of uniform cloth throughout the spring and summer months, in anticipation of its regular fall demand.

The Michie Co., law book publishers and printers, has also maintained its employment roll of 100 workers throughout the slack season and announces that business is normal.

Lewis Addresses Cumberland Group

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 23.—David J. Lewis, Democratic nominee for Congress in the Sixth Maryland District, opened his campaign in this city with an open-air address tonight at the city lot near the Blue Ridge. Mr. Lewis said that while the Republican party failed to name any issues in its platform for the coming elections, he would place before the people of the Sixth district well defined reasons for success of the Democratic party in November. He discussed the proposed restoration of coal mining in Maryland through securing just freight rates at Washington; employment insurance, national aid-age pensions, and the business and industrial depression which he charged to the recent tariff legislation enacted at Washington.

Mr. Lewis says he will bring these questions before the voters that they may decide between a platform of criticism and the well-defined group of issues upon which he will make his fight for election.

Oliver H. Bruce, chairman of the Democratic State central committee for Allegany County, also spoke. Tomorrow Mr. Lewis will speak at Valley and Columbia streets and he proposes to wage an active campaign until the election.

METHODIST SESSION TO MEET IN BRISTOL

Holston Conference Will Hold 107th Gathering October 9 to 14.

BISHOP DUBOSE IN CHAIR

Bristol, Va., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The Holston Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will convene in its 107th annual session here October 9-14, with Bishop Horace M. Dubose, of Nashville, Tenn., presiding.

The conference embraces a territory stretching from War Eagle, W. Va., to Pikeville, Pa., a distance by rail of 556 miles. It includes such towns as Bluefield, W. Va.; Radford, Va.; Marion, Wytheville, Abingdon, Bristol, Tenn.; Johnson City, Morristown, Knoxville, Maryville, Sweetwater, Athens, Cleveland, Chattanooga, Dayton, South Pittsburgh, Jasper, Dunlap, Pikeville and the surrounding rural districts.

Will Organize Board.

The conference is composed of 246 active preachers, 25 undergraduates on trial and 46 superannuates. Besides these there are 89 lay delegates elected by the ten presiding elders' districts. The 32 local preachers employed as "supplies" or circuit riders are entitled to attendance at the conference to report their work. They have no vote, however.

Principal among the matters of interest to be presented at the conference will be the appointment and organization of the new board of Christian education, which is a combination of Sunday school board, Epworth League board and the conference board of education.

The board is to elect its own executive officers, one or more of whom will have salaried positions. The object of the consolidation, according to conference officials, is not so much a reduction of overhead expense as a unified approach to the heart and mind of the young people of the church."

Not Lawmaking Body.

The annual conference is an administrative, and not lawmaking, body. It records reports of preachers in charge of stations and circuits, examines undergraduates on courses of study, elects to orders and ordains, through the bishop and elders; receives reports of boards and committees, appoints new boards and committees, maps out and provides for the work of the new year, appoints the preachers to their several charges and transacts such other business as comes under the jurisdiction of the conference.

Once in each four years it elects clerical and lay delegates—an equal number of each—to the general conference, which is the Methodist lawmaking body.

300 PER CENT INTEREST RATE FIXED FOR PLEDGING WATCH

The man behind the counter at 434 Ninth street was somewhat cagier than the others visited. He probably recognized a companion of the reporter as having tried to "hock" jewelry before. He wouldn't promise to lend any money nor would he recommend any second-hand dealer.

"How about all that jewelry in the case?" he was asked.

"That is all bankrupt stock that was bought at auction," was the reply.

"Does bankrupt stock have initials on?"

"Sometimes," he said.

There was no business there.

Reporter Emerges Unscathed.

While walking down D street, near Sixth street northwest, the potential patron had to fight to the point of exhaustion to prevent being dragged into one of the second-hand clothing stores by persistent salesmen. He emerged unscathed.

Then the next scene opened under the shadow of Benjamin Franklin's statue. At Fogel's Economy Store, on the northeast corner of Tenth and D streets, the patron with the watch entered to obtain a loan.

The jeweler was called and offered to lend $4 on the watch. This was accepted. When asked for a receipt for the transaction it was explained that no receipts are given. He promised to hold the watch for 30 days, at the expiration of which it would cost $5 to redeem it. This represents interest at 300 per cent a year.

The name of the pawner was taken and no security was given for its safekeeping, except the word of the clerk.

Inspector William S. Shelby, head of the detective bureau, in his annual report, has incorporated the recommendation that a less stringent pawnshop law be enacted to permit legitimate brokers to return to the District.

Under the present law, pawnbrokers are permitted to charge only 1 per cent a month and a $500 license fee is required, as well as a $5,000 bond. These prohibitive clauses caused an excursion of legitimate dealers to places beyond the District line. In their place came the second-hand dealers, who attempt to evade the law by withholding a record of the transaction.

Commissioner Herbert S. Crosby has expressed himself in accord with the view of Inspector Shelby that the licensing of pawnshops and the exodus of the present dealers would be of great aid to the police in tracking stolen goods.

Inspector Shelby believes that if dealers were permitted to charge 2 or 3 per cent a month they could operate on a paying basis. The 1 per cent per month basis of the present law is too small a margin of profit, brokers said, before they moved out.

At the next session of Congress it is hoped by police officials that a law will be enacted to allow pawnbrokers to charge from 24 to 36 per cent interest a year, instead of the 300 to 900 per cent charged by the second-hand dealers, with no written assurance that one's pawn may be redeemed.

Fire Prevention Week Is Pressed in Fairfax

Edmund H. Allen, of Newington, Fairfax County, drought relief chairman and president of the County Chamber of Commerce, is sending letters to the people of the county calling their attention to the fact that October 5 to 11 this year has been designated as National Fire Prevention Week. He states in his letter that the drought situation has brought to Fairfax County an added responsibility and it is of the greatest importance that we protect against fire. In most sections of the county water is not available for fire fighting and the unusual condition now existing greatly increases the fire hazard.

He also advises each person to inspect and clean all rubbish from his premises to eliminate fire menaces and hazardous conditions. He closes his letter asking all to locate the nearest fire company to their home and the best method to secure assistance if needed and to do everything possible to prevent fires.

INVADERS IN PEIPING DECLARE PEACE AIM

WILL ACT AS MEDIATORS

Peiping, China, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Manchurian troops which took control of this city today displayed not only bayonets but also posters describing their invasion as being in the interest of peace.

The posters said the country cannot afford a continuation of civil war and declares the aim of the soldiers is simply mediation.

Gen. Feng Yu-Hsiang, whose soldiers have borne the brunt of the fighting, faces an uncertain fate. However, it appears certain that his troops have ahead of them a march of retreat to the famine-stricken regions of Shansi and Kansu provinces.

While three battalions of Manchurians occupy the city, a large reserve force was stationed in the suburbs. Everything went along so smoothly that observers wondered whether Gen. Chang Hsueh-Liang was really so hostile to the Northern combination as its Nanking spokesman had asserted.

Lennox Simpson, customs commissioner at Tientsin continued to carry on his work and the Nanking nominee, Mr. Grierson, declared he would wait to take over the work as soon as transfer of control of the city had been completed. Simpson declared in an interview he would hand over the customs only to the official who can produce proper credentials.

"Under no circumstances," Simpson declared, "can we recognize anyone coming direct from Nanking. The French concession authorities have consented to render protection to prevent forcible seizure. I have sent delegates to Mukden to give a report on conditions to Marshal Chang and asking for instructions. We are anxious that Mukden send a delegate to take over the customs. I do not desire to try to hold this position but I hope the new staff will be allowed to remain."

Tientsin, China, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—It was estimated today that 60,000 Fengtienites have marched toward Peiping, but the Tientsin administration had not yet been taken over by the Manchu authorities and the Shansi officials continue to hold office pending arrival of their successors.

MILITARY TEACHER DONATES AWARDS

Col. Deems Spurs Students to Compete on Target Range for Prizes.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Col. Clarence Deems, jr., professor of military science and tactics of the Alexandria High Schools, has offered a number of medals to be competed for by the students, the awards to be made for proficiency in their work.

Three bronze medals are offered for proficiency on the target range, one for firing in sitting position, one kneeling and the other standing. Scores for these medals are to be fired at any time after publication of the notice, up to and including December 9, 1930. The firing is to be on medal (not Government) targets, five shots only to be allowed for each target. The scores to be presented are the total of the two highest targets in any of the positions specified (both for the same position); the scores to be determined at the time of firing by the professor of military science and tactics or his assistant. Later scores, higher than those already made, may be presented at any time up to the close of the competition.

A special medal is offered by Col. Deems to that cadet who, having joined the cadet corps after January 1, 1930, turns in the two best medal targets of five shots each before December 1, 1930, the shots to be fired in the prone position only.

For the purpose of encouraging better shooting in the standing position, Col. Deems has offered five bronze medals, one each for the members of the winning team in a special match to be fired at the end of the corps area match, about the end of next February, one team of five members to be selected from the Alexandria High School and one from cadets of the George Mason High School. The entries will be determined by the president of the rifle club at each school. This will be a "shoulder to shoulder" match, fired in the basement of the Jefferson School, one cadet from each of the two schools firing against cadet from the other school, both being at the firing point at the same time.

The corps area match is the most important of the year, and the Alexandria High Schools will enter one team to be composed of the 15 best shots in the corps. In this match the firing will be at government targets in all positions. Those who make the ten highest total scores will be awarded the major letter in athletics for the school they represent.

The Hearts trophy match will be fired probably between January 1 and March 31, 1931. This consists of a team of five members, and it has been suggested that the five who come out highest in the corps area match be selected to compose the first team. Arrangements for this match will be effected by the ordnance officer, under the supervision of the professor of military science and tactics.

Baugess served in the Canadian Army during the World War, and only a short time before his death he purchased the tinning business of L. B. Alexander, on South Pitt street. Henry T. Moncure and Francis H. Fannon were in charge of the program.

Fred C Goodnow, vice president of the club, presided. Talbert Haslett, a new member, was presented. The secretary, Dr. Herbert Cross, made a report on the interclub trip to Yorktown, leaving the city on October 3, and urged a large attendance.

The little frame building covering Hume Spring, which was placed there many years ago to protect the spring in the center of the roadway, of what was then a country road and is now a much-used highway, was moved yesterday to the side of the road and the work of piping the water to the new location and changing the concrete flooring and half wall around the spring will be completed this week. When this work is done the road improvements will be finished on Mount Vernon avenue and this small section opened to traffic, which has been closed for several months waiting for the removal of the spring.

A called meeting of the Alexandria city council, scheduled for this afternoon, has been postponed until tomorrow afternoon, when it will consider with a view to giving immediate approval the 30-year franchise to the Seaboard Investment Trust, of Boston, for using city streets to lay and maintain gas mains.

The act will be a perfunctory step in completing the necessary formalities in the recently-announced purchase of the Alexandria Gas Co. by the Seaboard Investment Trust, owners of the Washington and Georgetown companies, at a price of $750,000. The sale was approved by a vote of four to one at a meeting of the town council last Thursday.

COAGE TAKES OATH AS DEEDS RECORDER

IS NATIVE OF DELAWARE

Jefferson Stansbury Coage, second deputy recorder of deeds for the past five years, was sworn in yesterday by the chief clerk of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia as recorder of deeds to succeed Arthur G. Froe, of West Virginia, the incumbent.

The new recorder will not take office until October 1. He is recognized as a protege of Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, who is now filling out the unexpired term of the late Senator T. Coleman du Pont, and is up for election in November, being opposed by Thomas Bayard and the du Pont interests. He has for many years resided at 1911 Eleventh street northwest, although maintaining his legal residence in Wilmington, Del., the place of his birth.

He was appointed second deputy recorder of deeds immediately after his return to this country from service on the Virgin Islands Commission, to which he was appointed by President Coolidge. Previously he served as a clerk in the census office, in 1900, as a protege of Col. Henry du Pont, being the first colored man to hold a civil service appointment from the State of Delaware.

For many years he was a director of the Jane Moseley and the River Queen, excursion steamers, that plied from here to Washington Park, Glymont, Somerset Beach, Norfolk and Old Point Comfort. He has been a national speaker in every Republican campaign since 1904.

Statue Unveiled Of Boies Penrose

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—A bronze statue of Boies Penrose, United States senator from Pennsylvania for a quarter century, was unveiled today as many tributes were paid to the memory of the prominent statesman of a decade ago. Senator Joseph R. Grundy, who acceded to the seat formerly held by Senator Penrose, and Gov. Fisher paid homage to his memory.

An echo of the Senate lobby committee's investigation during the last session of Congress was heard in the speech of Senator Grundy, who presided at the ceremony.

"Within his (Penrose's) service in the Senate," Senator Grundy said, "he saw the country adopt the sixteenth amendment providing for the income tax, one effect of which has been to saddle upon the people of the progressive and productive States a large part of the burden of supporting the backward States of the Nation."

Two packets of private letters have not been touched by the committee of professors.

The committee said today careful examination of the documents has shown that some reports already published about the fate of the expedition were erroneous on important points, due to the fact that the writing had been misread. The professors said they hoped to be able to publish a preliminary description of the final stage of the explorers' adventures.

Before reaching final conclusions, the professors will consult experts on polar journeys who have spent winters in the Arctic under conditions similar to those on White Island

NEW GERMAN POCKET APPARATUS AIDS THE DEAFENED

Can be had on free trial

From Germany comes a small electrical appliance that bids fair to become the greatest boon to deafened people in many years. So small is this new appliance that it can be conveniently carried concealed in the clothing with as little bother as a watch. This newcomer, Teutonophone, is a product of post-war Germany and is being demonstrated and distributed by Kloman Instrument Co., Inc., 911 19th St. N.W.

Teutonophone indicates a striking advance over former type earphones. Its power to amplify sounds for even those with only a small percentage of hearing is amazing—yet it is as clear as a bell and produces enlarged sounds with a mellowness of tone not before attained. Included in this hearing aid is a remarkable tiny appliance, a button-like transmitter the size of a silver half dollar and an earpiece small enough to be worn inside the ear without a headband. The weight of this instrument is about two ounces.

While the instruments are superbly made and finished, they are being offered to the deafened at unprecedentedly low prices—so that no one with defective hearing need deprive himself of the benefits of Teutonophone. To appreciate thoroughly the benefit and comfort these instruments offer to deafened persons, an actual test is essential, because mere words cannot portray them adequately.

The distributors of Teutonophone will be pleased to mail complete information regarding these instruments to any one writing to them. They will be glad to demonstrate them privately at their offices daily from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

GOV. POLLARD TO SPEAK

The sixteenth annual convention of the American Association of Personal Finance Companies will open this morning at the United States Chamber of Commerce. The convention will last through Friday, and approximately 650 delegates from 24 States are expected to attend.

Francis L. Thompson, chairman of the executive committee of the national organization said the increasing demand for small loans, indicates a growing confidence on the part of persons of small income that employment conditions are improving.

Registrations began Sunday at the Mayflower Hotel for the delegates, and continued yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce Building. General sessions will begin this morning at 9:30 o'clock, with Albert T. Snite, president of the national association, presiding.

Addresses of welcome will be delivered by Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, and Chester Leasure for the United States Chamber of Commerce. The Rev. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, will deliver the invocation.

At noon today a luncheon will be held at the Mayflower Hotel, with Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia as the guest of honor. At the luncheon Gov. Pollard will speak on "The Social Responsibilities of Business," while Grosvenor M. Jones, of the Department of Commerce, will speak on "The Development of Industry."

Following the luncheon, there will be a boat excursion to Mount Vernon, leaving the hotel at 2 o'clock, and for those who prefer golf, a tournament will be held at the Indian Spring Golf Club.

Tonight there will be a session of the convention at the Chamber of Commerce building, when the public aspects of personal finance will be the topic of the delegates. L. C. Harbison will preside. Speakers will include Charles R. Parker, of the Department of Banking of Indiana; A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and Dr. Frank Parker, of the Wharton School of Finance at Philadelphia.

CLARA BOW'S NAME IS USED BY WOMAN ON GAMING CHECKS

They were drawn on the Hollywood branch of the California Bank. One of the checks was countersigned by "Daisy I. Duer," who said she was Miss Bow's secretary, James McKay, one of the resort owners, said. Miss Bow's secretary is Miss Daisy Devoe.

The Gazette quoted McKay as saying Miss Bow was introduced to him by a man who said he was Will Rogers and they were accompanied by a woman who said she was Marie Dressler.

While certain forms of gambling are legal in Nevada, attorneys said checks given in outlawed games of chance could not be collected in court. Some card games such as poker, where a percentage is not taken out by the house, and pari-mutuel betting on horse racing have been legalized. Dice, twenty-one, faro and roulette games are officially barred, but have gone unsuppressed.

Rogers and several other prominent Hollywood actors had been on location at Lake Tahoe for several weeks, not far from Calneva Lodge.

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 23.—Clara Bow, reported in Reno, Nev., dispatches to have repudiated checks of $13,500 issued at a Lake Tahoe Lodge gambling table, denied today any one had any "rightful claims" to money from her.

"If any one in the world," the red-headed film actress said, "feels he has a rightful claim against me for any sum of money whatsoever, which I deny, I will gladly accept service of any legal document. I always pay any honest debts promptly."

Miss Bow's statement was issued by her in answer to declarations of Reno attorneys for the lodge that she had given the checks only to have them returned by a Hollywood bank marked "payment stopped."

B. P. Schulberg, executive of the Paramount Studio, said he had received no communication from the Reno attorneys concerning the checks.

"Certainly no one," Mr. Schulberg said, "has gotten in touch with me about the payment of any check whatsoever supposedly signed by Clara Bow. I have heard nothing about any such reports."

Another Paramount official pointed out if a letter had been sent from Reno yesterday, as reported, it probably would not be delivered to the studio before tomorrow.

FORGED WIRE ORIGIN SOUGHT IN WINNIPEG

James Stewart Denies That Messages in His Name Are Authentic.

PRICES GO DOWNWARD

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The source of messages describing the Canadian wheat pool as in a "shaky financial condition," which sent prices in the principal exchanges crashing to new lows before they could be denied, was sought tonight by the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

The messages, sent to the Chicago Board of Trade, the New York Produce Exchange, the Montreal Board of Trade, and the Liverpool Corn Exchange, were signed with the name of James Stewart, prominent Winnipeg grain operator. Stewart emphatically denied they came from him.

Denial by Premier.

An additional statement in the messages that the wheat pool was to be taken over by the western provincial governments, drew a prompt denial from Premier John Bracken, of Manitoba.

"Theer is absolutely no truth in such a rumor," the premier said. "No such suggestion has ever been made to my government."

A. P. White, president of the Winnipeg Exchange, declared the reports erroneous and added his denial of the authenticity of the signatures to Stewart's. The telegraph company whose wires carried the messages cooperated in an effort to trace them.

The spurious messages sent prices on the Winnipeg exchange plunging to new low levels. The close was at bottom prices. Losses for the day ranged from 2¾ to 2½ cents a bushel. October wheat reached a new 24-year record low of 73¼ cents a bushel, down 2⅝ cents for the session.

November closed at 74⅞, off 2¾; December finished at 75⅞ to 76 cents, down 2⅝, and May was off 2⅛ cents at 82⅝.

Bearish influence on other grain came with an announcement of reductions in the initial payments of the wheat pool on oats, flax and rye. No alterations was made in the 60-cent advance on wheat.

More cheering news, however, came from the head of Lake Superior, dismissing as groundless the fear that wheat-crammed elevators would slow down movement of the new crop from Western prairie farmlands.

Dominion Aid Urged.

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Dominion government assistance in the marketing of the wheat crop was advocated today by James G. Gardiner, former premier of Saskatchewan, and now a leader of the Liberal opposition in that province.

He said the wheat pool was having a difficult time because the margin between the advance by the pool to the farmers and the selling price of wheat is so small.

Criticism of the new duties on agricultural implements was voiced by Mr. Gardiner. The additional duties, he said, would make it almost impossible for the farmers to buy new binders. Most of the Western farmers, he said, have not been able to afford new ones since the war and now would have to keep on mending their old machines.

Brewery Gun Gang Dwindles to Four

Six Agents Overpowered by Fewer Men in aFtal Raid.

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 23 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—After three hours of reconstructing the murder of Prohibition Agent John Finiello, at the Rising Sun brewery here last Friday, it developed tonight that six prohibition agents who were raiding the brewery had been overpowered by only three or four men.

Prosecutor A. J. David and Deputy Prohibition Administrator MacPhee, of Newark, agreed that the number of armed buerillas who broke up the raid could hardly have numbered more than four. This conrtasted with with the early stories of the agents, who painted a lurid tale of a mob of twelve or more guerillas disarming them and killing Finiello.

While beer circles in Elizabeth were buzzing with talk of how six agents had been conquered by three or four gunmen, Col. Amos W. Woodstock, national prohibition commissioner, declared in Philadelphia that "if force is necessary, we will use force."

Convict Russian Lumber Seen Menace to America

Escaped Yankee From Soviet Prison Camp in Ural Mountains Tells Why Slav Undersells World and for What Purpose.

In the vast wastes of northern Russia, forced labor is producing timber which will eventually stagnate the lumber industry in this country.

This belief, firmly dinned into the mind of Aaron Kopman by two years in a Soviet prison camp in the foothills of the Ural Mountains, is the incentive which brought him here to assist American labor.

Kopman is an American citizen, who for years, had traveled in Russia as a representative of various paper and pulp industries of this country. But he was unable to sell the Soviet Government what they wanted—credit.

On Saturday he will tell the Fish congressional committee in New York City, the story which he related yesterday in the lobby of the Hotel Powhatan. Let him tell his own story:

"In 1925 I had been traveling through Russia as a representative of subsidiaries of the International Paper Mills. One morning I was dragged from my bed in the City of Pskov, near the Latvian border, by the Cheka, the dreaded secret police of the Communists.

"I was taken to Moscow and placed in the Butyrsky, the bastile for political prisoners. After three months I was transferred from the Butyrsky to Ust Usk, in the province of Perm near the Arctic Circle.

"For two years I tried to get word to my friends in this country that I was imprisoned. I was given no trial. No charges were made against me. I was herded into a cage with other prisoners like so many cattle and shipped to the timberlands.

"Letters which I had written to American consuls never reached their destinations. Life in the prison camp was like a living death. Malaria was prevalent due to the swampy regions. Convicts died at the rate of twenty a day. Since I had once attended the Imperial Palace of Medicine of St. Petersburg I was made health officer.

"We lived in log cabins. Sometimes 300 were crowded into them. The food was bad. Sanitary conditions were worse. When I left there in 1927 more than 6,000 men and 750 women were incarcerated. Last year there were 15,000 prisoners in the camp.

"We worked sometimes as long as eighteen hours a day in the freezing cold. This lumber was for export to foreign countries, most of it was consigned to England.

"It is significant that with the inception of these lumber camps the Scandinavian lumber market which had been supplying England, collapsed. Free labor could not compete with the convict products.

"What happened to the Scandinavian market will happen to the American market. Every foot of lumber which is imported from Russia by this country displaces an equivalent of American-made timber. In Russia it costs 5 cents to feed a convict each day. Wages for an American logger is between $5 and $6 a day. Figure it out for yourself. American labor will be unable to compete."

Mr. Kopman will confer with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, before going to New York City. He explains that the motive of the Soviet Union is to demoralize the industries of other countries. It wants to convert itself from an agricultural to an industrial nation.

"To do this it must have machinery," he said. "It has no money to buy it. Consequently, it is flooding foreign markets with its timber, manganese and pulp, which brings the money to aid in the industrialization." He claims to have authentic information, which is reported to be borne out by Treasury Department reports, that 40 shiploads of wood pulp, produced by convict labor, is now in the harbor of Archangel ready for shipment to this country.

How did he get out of the prison camp?

There was a Latvian about to be released from the prison. Mr. Kopman wrote a letter on a handkerchief. The released prisoner smuggled it to the American consul at Riga, Latvia, and explained his plight.

The British consul at Moscow inquired. Soviet officials claimed to know nothing of the imprisoned American citizen. The State Department inquired into the case. He was freed.

There happened to be two American cruisers in the Baltic Sea at the time.

BURIAL OF TEACHER TO BE IN ARLINGTON

Instructor of Army nad Navy Men Will Be Accorded Military Honor.

FUNERAL SERVICE TODAY

George B. Schadmann will be buried tomorrow afternoon in Arlington National Cemetery. He was not a soldier, but his name had been carried to the seven seas by the men he had taught to be soldiers and sailors. In recognition of this, he is to be given the final tribute usually accorded military men.

As head of the Columbia Preparatory School o fthis city, Mr. Schadmann sent more than 2,000 young men to West Point and Annapolis. He had taught in Washington for more than 40 years. Plans had been made by his family to bury him in Williamsport, Pa., but word came yesterday that the War Department had offered a resting place in Arlington.

Mr. Schadmann is quoted as having often said that he wanted to be buried in Arlington where he could be with many of the boys he had taught, as he expressed it.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Church of the Epiphany. Burial will not take place until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon Mr. Schadmann died Sunday. He was 65 years old. He is survived by two sisters and two brothers. Mrs. George H. Grove, Mrs. J. C. Yount, and Harry and Raymond Schadmann.

FALSE REPORTS SEND CHICAGO GRAIN DOWN

and declared the fact the corporation could dump this wheat on the market at any time exercised a psychological bearish influence over the market. The Grain Stabilization Corporation is sponsored by the Federal Farm Board.

London, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—While sales of Russian wheat have been attracting attention in the United States and complaints of Soviet dumping of their product have been voiced at Geneva, a great outcry has developed in interested quarters here against alleged dumping of Russian grain, timber and other commodities in this country.

A section of the London press is featuring particularly the wheat situation. Grain prices reached a record postwar low level yesterday, due, it is alleged, principally to Soviet dumping, which, according to some statements, has "knocked the bottom out of prices."

The Soviet government, it is stated, has chartered a large number of steamers, mostly British, for the Black Sea grain and Archangel timber trades. Fifty ships were chartered at Cardiff alone and the total tonnage is said to be nearly 600,000.

The grain market here is in a state of nervous uncertainty. Meanwhile other quarters point out that there are various contributory causes for the low price of wheat. Bakers are contemplating reductions in the price of bread.

FISH TO INVESTIGATE RUSS WHEAT SALES

Chicago Board of Trade to Aid in Inquiry of Short Selling by Soviet.

ODDIE SEEKS EXCLUSION

(Associated Press.)

Assurance that Chicago Board of Trade officials will cooperate with the House Communist investigating committee in its inquiry into the short selling of wheat by the Russian government was given yesterday to Chairman Fish.

Replies that they would "gladly cooperate" at the hearing to be held Monday to investigate charges by Secretary Hyde that the Soviet sold 7,500,000 bushels of wheat short on the Chicago Board of Trade came from John A. Bunnell, president of the board of trade; Joseph W. Badenock, chairman of its business conduct committee, and Fred S. Clutton, secretary.

The committee will hear officials of the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, the organization identified by Mr. Hyde as that which placed the selling orders, and brokers who handled them, at a hearing in New York Saturday.

While plans were going forward for the hearings, Senator Oddie, of Nevada, said he would introduce a bill to exclude Russian wheat, manganese, coal, lumber, wood pulp, gelatin and glue from the United States.

The Nevadan said the Soviet economic system had collapsed and that Russia had been forced to experiment in an effort to create, at the expense of industries in the United States and elsewhere, paper profits in foreign trade to offset heavy losses in the domestic trade.

The Senator charged that "the Soviet government is now trying to impose on some of the principal industries of the United States by dumping exports regardless of price and absorbing production losses through the enslavement of the Russian peasantry and the inflation of its currency."

Secretary Hyde will return to Washington tomorrow from Ann Arbor, Mich. Earlier he had considered the possibility of visiting Chicago to confer with the grain exchange officials, but word came yesterday that he would come direct to Washington.

St. Lawrence Group Picks Its Engineers

New York, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Robert Murray Haig, chairman of the St. Lawrence Power Development Commission, today announced the membership of its engineering board which is to report to the commission on the technical feasibility and financial cost of the proposed water power development.

The board includes Lieut. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, of Washington, chairman; William H. Woodard, of New York; Frederick Stewart Greene, of Albany, and C. G. Thurlow, of Birmingham, Ala., engineer in charge of design and construction of many hydro-electric projects in the South.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS HALT COSTE FLIGHT

tion Mark stood poised at the Municipal Airport this morning, the massive Rockies, their white mantles glistening in the sun seemed to flash a challenge to the French fliers.

"We will fly directly across them" Coste said speaking through an interpreter. The suggestion had been made to him that he follow the regular air mail course north from Denver to Cheyenne, Wyo., and thence west over the lower mountains to Salt Lake instead of going in a direct line west from Denver.

Three hours after the ship left here it reappeared.

"We went up 20,000 feet," Coste said, as he stepped from the ship. "Still it was not enough for safety.

"We ran into a terrific snowstorm and fog near the Continental Divide and veered northeast, thinking we would change our course, after all, to that followed by the air mail. But we could not reach Cheyenne. At Greeley, Colo., we ran into down drafts and once we dropped 4,000 feet.

"I wasn't airsick, but the ship was. At times it seemed that the wind would tear the plane in two."

The trip tomorrow, the Frenchmen said, probably will be by way of Cheyenne, although they were not sure of this.

The two escort planes of the fliers chose the Cheyenne route, but were forced down at Rock Springs, Wyo. They planned to resume the flight as soon as weather conditions permitted.

Coste said he probably would cut short his stay at Los Angeles one day to make up for the time lost here.

Report Due Tomorrow On Postoffice Leases

(Associated Press.)

The report of the Postoffice Department of leases of property for substations, out of which charges of fraud and corruption have arisen in the Senate, is to be made public by the White House tomorrow morning.

It will deal minutely with each of the leases which cost the Government $17,000,000 last year.

BACKING OF GROCER IS LAID TO SEYMOUR

CLUB OF TWO ON STAND

Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Testimony that George W. Norris, "number two," the former Broken Bow, Nebr., grocer, had received a $500 bond after completing his filing as an opponent of Senator George W. Norris for the Republican senatorial nomination, was given the senatorial committee investigating campaign expenditures in Nebraska.

Paul Johnson, a Broken Bow attorney, who handled the filing for the former grocer who, subsequently was disqualified by the State supreme court, on the ground he filed too late, was the witness. He said he "assumed" that the bond came from Victor Seymour, of Lincoln. Seymour is now in Denver handling the Republican campaign in western States.

The witnesses added that the package containing the bond "bore a Lincoln postmark" and that he "knew that Seymour had paid Norris' filing fee of $50 for the Senate."

The former grocer testified that the bond was "simply placed in his hands," but later said he "believed" it was from Seymour. Norris number two had previously testified that he had attempted to enter the Republican senatorial race of his own volition, but this was contradicted today by Johnson.

The Loyal Republican Club, of Lincoln, and two officers, who constitute its entire membership had its inning before Senator Nye earlier in the day.

Raymond E. Atkinson, a trucker, the president and D. R. Littlejohn, the secretary, said they had organized the club to oppose Norris and "do something in politics." Littlejohn said that circulars in opposition to Norris were "mailed out by the thousands" by the "club."

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PLANS.

The Washington Chamber of Commerce has worked out an intensive five-year expansion program having a fourfold aim. It is desired "to make the local Chamber of Commerce compare in strength, influence and community usefulness with the strongest chambers of commerce in the country;" it is planned "to modernize where necessary its organization structure and its methods of operating, and especially to afford an opportunity for widespread group and committee service;" it is hoped "to make the chamber an organization in which the views of the members can be quickly crystallized on matters where a united front of all local groups is desired and to broaden the work of the organization so that it will render essential services to various general groups, such as the chambers of commerce of other cities do in upbuilding trade, commerce and industry."

This is an ambitious program that, if carried through, should prove of far-reaching benefit to the community. A chamber of commerce can be an outstanding asset to a community. It should take the lead in civic development and improvement, standing in most matters as a connecting link between the local government and the people. The local Chamber of Commerce fulfills a valuable function in Washington, but there exists a wide latitude for expanding and improving its service.

One factor that stands in the way of expanding the usefulness of the local Chamber of Commerce is the division of affiliation of local businessmen among too many organizations. The Merchants and Manufacturers Association, the Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce have a great deal in common, although each organization insists that it serves a special interest and that it was organized for a special purpose. If a way could be found for merging these three groups, preserving the identity of each as a division of the larger organization, and drawing into the larger organization the smaller professional, trade and commerce bodies serving special groups, there would result an influential organization capable of speaking for Washington as a whole and far better able to work for the advancement of Washington than are the many smaller organizations even when they work in concert. Such a merger is eminently desirable.

PAN-AMERICAN FARM BANK.

Among the proposals seriously considered by the inter-American conference on agriculture, forestry and animal industry was that there be established with headquarters in New York a Pan-American agricultural bank capitalized at $20,000,000. The purpose of the institution would be to facilitate rural credits and the discussion indicated that the delegates believed that farm mortgages might be used as a basis for gold bonds, thus assuring a good return for investors while improving the position of farmers throughout the Latin-American countries where the bank would establish branches. The conference appointed a committee of five to draft a plan of organization for submission to the various governments through the Pan-American Union. The plan, it was said, was discussed informally with high Government officials who regarded it favorably and it bears the indorsement of leading bank executives.

It would appear, on the surface, that such an institution would be able to play a prominent part in solving an agricultural problem that is common to the American republics. But grave peril to international amity lurks behind the proposal. The plan was advanced by Dr. Decio Machado, of the Brazilian delegation, but it will be difficult indeed, if the proposal goes beyond the conversational stage, to make the people of South America believe that it was advanced by any other than an ingenious Yankee. America's southern neighbors believe as do Americans themselves that their civilizations are based in the soil. They will resent and oppose any movement that seems to have as its aim banker domination of agriculture. They will particularly oppose a movement that would seem to hold a possibility of the subjugation of South American agriculture by Wall street. The plan for a Pan-American agricultural bank promises to be handy ammunition for the guns of the anti-American propagandists.

If the provision of additional credit facilities for South American agriculture presents a problem pressing enough to call for the creation of a banking institution especially created for the purpose, the bank should be located somewhere south of the Rio Grande. Americans could participate in its organization and operation but inasmuch as the bank would function principally in South America it should be officered and operated chiefly by those who are intimately familiar with conditions in South America. North American capital, no doubt, would be glad to come into such an institution, but it should be brought in on an equal footing with South American capital.

LAST OF THE VETERANS.

With the death of Representative Charles Manly Stedman yesterday in Washington the name of the only remaining veteran of the Civil War disappears from the rolls of Congress. Maj. Stedman served in Lee's army for four years. From Appomattox he returned to North Carolina to complete his education and, subsequently, to hang out his shingle as a lawyer. He was almost 70 years old when the people of his State elected him to the Sixty-second Congress. He was not only the oldest member of that body, but also one of the oldest in point of service. Maj. Stedman would have turned 90 upon his next birthday.

Patriarchal in appearance, erect in carriage, clear-eyed and firm-voiced, Maj. Stedman was one of the outstanding figures in the House. Of recent years he did not speak frequently on the floor, but because he was beloved of his colleagues his counsel was always sought. His well-stored mind, broad sympathies and sound judgment were an asset to Congress.

Upon his eighty-fifth birthday and upon each succeeding birthday, the House suspended business to congratulate and felicitate Representative Stedman. He will be sadly missed in the next session. The memory of this picturesque and gallant gentleman will not fade from the minds of those who knew him.

CHINA'S LATEST CHANGE.

The most recent shuffling of the cards in China has brought to the war-torn provinces an ominous quiet. Chang Hsueh-liang, governor of Manchuria, has swept down from the north with 120,000 men and dispossessed the rebels of their capital at Peking and most of the territory they formerly held. When the forces of the Nationalist government and the rebels were exhausted by a hard summer of fighting the young Manchurian general inaugurated a "peace" campaign. The backbone of the northern coalition has been broken, but what does Chang Hsueh-liang intend? Does he aspire to become dictator of China as did his father, Chang Tso-lin? Or is he willing to cooperate with the Nationalist government in the rehabilitation of China?

Manchuria held aloof from the struggle all summer, disregarding urgent appeals for support from both sides. An offer of three cabinet posts in the rebel government set up at Peking failed to tempt Chang. Apparently he has now decided to uphold the central government at Nanking. He has taken possession of Tientsin and Peking, and it is announced that he will serve the government as rehabilitation commissioner. As further indication of his devotion to the Nationalists' cause, Chang has sent troops southward to aid President Chiang Kai-shek in the final struggle against Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang. It is rumored that his allegiance was won by an offer of Chihli Province, including Tientsin and Peking, and $10,000,000 in gold. This would not be unusual in China, but it is probable that the real motives which prompted the Manchurian general to act will remain obscure for some time.

The sudden peace that has descended upon Chihli Province will remain suspicious until the program of Chang Hsueh-liang is made known. It should be noted that Yen Hsi-shan, the rebel general, and his troops are being allowed to depart in peace, in spite of the recent declaration from Nanking that he would be captured and punished. The suggestion that Chang is allowing Yen to withdraw peacefully because he may need his services later on might not be justified, but expediency is a powerful factor in Chinese politics.

To interpret Manchuria's interference as the end of civil warfare in China would be overoptimistic, but the prospects for a temporary peace appear to be good. The ruling party has already called a conference of its central executive committee to study reorganization of the government loan, adoption of a gold standard, unification of China's monetary system, and development of industries. If the war lords could submerge their personal ambitions to the welfare of China, the whole world would gain. Observers are unanimous in the hope that Chang has decided to place economic rehabilitation above military hegemony, but they will be watchful for the development of hostilities around this new focal point.

FOOD FASHIONS.

Common sense is used so sparingly in dietetics and so frequently ignored in individual dietary habits that it is really comforting to find that in general the consumption of food conforms to changing conditions of life. Dietetic fads have their effect. Fashions influence the kind of food chosen and the amount consumed, and the preachments of food experts bring discomforts into thousands of lives. But on the whole, it seems, people eat sensibly, and vary their foods with the demands of the body for energy.

O. E. Baker, of the Department of Agriculture, has given studious attention to the modern diet as compared with that of 20 years ago. He finds only a slight decrease in the amount of food calories consumed, but a considerable difference in the kind of foods used. Consumption of cereals has declined about 100 pounds per capita, with distressing results for the farmer. On the other hand, there has been a notable increase in the public taste for sugar, milk and vegetable oils. Vegetables have grown in popularity at the expense of wheat and corn meal. Fruits continue in strong demand, but oranges, grapes, peaches, &c., are encroaching upon the once supreme position of the apple.

These changes have come about, in the opinion of Mr. Baker, because human labor has been supplanted, to a large extent, by the use of machinery. Inasmuch as less energy is needed to do the work of the country, superfluous carbohydrates are banned. Improved methods of handling and shipping have made choice vegetable foods more available and delectable. It appears that the eating habits of the great majority, even if unpremeditated, are quite sensible, in spite of the lamentations of the dietists. It must be admitted that the feminine fetish for slender figures has had something to do with the shifting of the public taste for food, but there is an indication that excesses in this respect are passing.

Some dietists are converted to the theory that individuals should be left largely to their own tastes. Mr. Baker's findings suggest that the public is capable of regulating its own diet, and can not be intimidated into eating spinach and carrots.

MECHANIZED BREATHING.

Frances McGann, a student nurse in Chicago, is winning her fight against death by means of the "artificial lung." Though unable to breathe naturally because of paralyzed chest muscles, the mechanical apparatus which alternately produces a vacuum and a pressure within the cabinet that holds the nurse forces air in and out of her lungs. Hospital attaches have predicted that she will overcome the attack of infantile paralysis which incapacitates her breathing. After having been in the respirator for a period of twelve days, Miss McGann was removed for periods of five minutes each, and was able to breathe naturally during these short periods.

The remarkable fact of this fight against death is that Miss McGann is conscious, and watches everything that takes place around her. She is particularly interested in the mechanism which permits her to live. Upon her recovery she will be able to give suggestions which should aid in the perfection of the mechanism. Already she has suggested several changes for the comfort of the patients in the cabinet.

The manner in which Miss McGann has responded to the treatment demonstrates the practicability and value of the apparatus. At present there are only two mechanical respirators in the United States, one in California and the other in Chicago. After a few minor alterations have been made to perfect the machine all leading hospitals in the country should obtain at least one of them to be used for emergency cases where the victim is unable to breathe naturally.

BOBBY JONES

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

It is particularly fitting that Bobby Jones should make his final bid for the undisputed championship of golf in 1930 at the Merion Cricket Club. Upon this famous course he made his debut in national competition. His first amateur title was won there eight years later. Now he returns in an attempt to add this title to the United States open and the British open and amateur championships which he holds this season. If he succeeds, he will be the first golfer ever to hold the four major titles in the same year.

Among the contestants and the spectators at Merion this week are some who recall the debut that made Bobby Jones known as the "Kid Wonder." That was fourteen years ago, and the Atlantan was then 14 years old. He qualified with a sensational 74 for the first round and an 89 on the second. In the first two rounds of match play he defeated E. M. Byers and F. W. Dyer, veteran stars. Then he lost, 4 and 3, to Bob Gardner, who eventually was runner-up to Chick Evans, the 1916 champion.

In 1924 Bobby Jones finally achieved his ambition of winning the United States amateur title. The nemesis which had shadowed him through other tournaments was not present when he returned to Merion. He defeated in succession W. J. Thompson, D. Clarke Corkran, Rudy Knepper and Francis Ouimet. Then he overwhelmed George Von Elm in the final, 9 and 8.

This has been Bobby Jones' greatest season. He invaded England with the Walker Cup team and was instrumental in winning the trophy at Sandwich, where he defeated the British star, Roger Wethered, in the singles and paired with Dr. Willing to beat Torrance and Hartley in the foursomes. Then came the British amateur tournament at historic St. Andrews, the "home of golf." This was the Atlantan's main objective, the only major championship which he had never held. It was hard going until the final round, which he won easily, the veteran Wethered again being his victim. Next, at Hoylake, he led the field in the British open tournament to win his eleventh national title.

With these British trophies in his bag, the Georgian entered and won the American open tournament at Interlachen, near Minneapolis. If he wins the amateur championship again at Merion he will hold a record which no golfer has yet attained and which even the "peerless Bobby" may never again have such a good chance of winning.

The opportunity of a lifetime lies here, but it will not be easy to realize. The list of entries is long and impressive. It contains the names of several titleholders and others whose skill commands respect. Although Harrison R. Johnston, the 1929 amateur champion and other real sportsmen agree that it would be a fine thing for Bobby Jones to win, they are out to win also. A temporary letdown—such as marked his speedy elimination last year—or any one of many possible flaws or misfortunes may check his progress toward a perfect record for 1930. The mental and physical hazards are great, but there will be thousands of sadly disappointed spectators at the Merion Cricket Club if Bobby Jones does not come through.

VALUE OF SHADE TREES.

Strikingly illustrative of the dollar-and-cent value of shade trees is the definite appraisal placed on them by city authorities, observes the American City. Springfield, Mass., may be cited as an example. Figures show that Springfield has more trees in proportion to population than any other American city, and the municipal government places an appraisal value of $100 on each tree. With a total of 25,000 trees in the city, this gives an appraised value of $2,500,000 to be counted as an added asset of the community. Ann Arbor, Mich., uses a similar method of computation and reckons the value of its 8,000 trees at $800,000. In reaching these figures the city officials follow the formula worked out by Prof. Filibert Roth, one of the foremost of American foresters, who formulated the first basis for shade tree valuation in this country.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

FATHER THOUGHT.

I would not at your laughter frown,
Nor try to cry your pleasure down;
Nor hint that mirth is wrong;
But as you laugh and as you dance,
Against life's every circumstance
I hope to have you strong.

This pleasure which you love so much
Will vanish at the slightest touch
Of shame or loss or pain.
When come life's sterner tests to you,
It will not stay to see you through
Or at your side remain.

So fine the line twixt wrong and right,
So great the cost of follies slight,
So cruel is the throng
That all who would outlast life's mirth
And end in peace their days on earth
Must build foundations strong.

Be happy every hour you can,
But play the woman and the man;
Hold fast to all that's best.
My prayer is this: When comes the strain
You will have courage for your pain

By ROBERT QUILLEN

PERSONAL standards of honor, like definitions of morality, are community habits.

The practices justified by the powerful and the fashionable in time become the standard of right accepted by the majority.

When the community frowns on smuggling, those who smuggle are sneaks and criminals; when America was young and great folk denied themselves tea unless it had been smuggled in defiance of King George, all smugglers were patriots.

At present the country is in process of making treachery respectable.

Spies of various sorts have become so common that comparatively few people now regard them with loathing, and national standards of fair play and decent sportsmanship have fallen so low that few people feel shame or indignation when an agent of the law persuades a victim to commit a crime and then arrests him for it.

Recently a private citizen of less than average intelligence ordered from a distant engraver a considerable quantity of stamps similar to those used by divisions of government as a source of revenue. The engraver, being suspicious, notified the authorities. He was instructed to fill the order and make delivery. When the stamps arrived, the law's agents were on hand to seize them and arrest the "criminal" they had so neatly trapped.

A small boy, having been told not to leave the yard, played near the open gate in the midst of temptation. Twice he started to go out, and twice virtue triumphed. He was weakening, however, and the third start proved his downfall. He was outside. Instantly an angry voice called him to the house.

"You get a spanking," said his mother. "I saw you start out the first two times, and I saw you go out."

"But mother," wailed the poor kid, "if you saw me start out and come back twice and knew I was trying not to go out, why didn't you tap on the window?"

The business of law is to prevent crime, not merely to punish criminals.

It may be necessary to fight the devil with fire, but tempting men to break the law in order to arrest them for breaking it is a despicable and degrading business.

People are no more decent than the methods they condone.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE GARBLE SISTERS.

"Did you read about all those revolutions in Asia?"

"Yeah, Peru and Argentina certainly upset thnigs. What was the name of that Peruvian president that was thrown out?"

"'Legs' Irigoyen, I think. They drove him out of office and put in Hipolito Crater."

"What casued the revolutions anyhow?"

"I think it was the tariff. The feller who was president of Peru had held the office for a long time."

"Who was he?"

"Not William Jennings Briand?"

"Maybe, I'm not certain."

* * * *

"What was the trouble in Peru, any how?"

"Something about William Randolph Hearst being ordered out of the country. He had to cross the border into Turkey—or some place."

"The papers have certainly had alotta exciting news lately. Did you read about how they found that explorer's body in the ice after seventeen years?"

"Sir Thomas Lipton's, wasn't it?"

"I think so. He was found frozen all those years, just like Calvin Coolidge."

"Where did they find him?"

"Off a place called Brenton's Reef, if I remember right."

"Did you go to the international polo matches?"

"No, but wasn't it wonderful what a great player that westerner Huey Long turned out to be! He scored nine goals in one game."

"He and Morris Guest were the stars of the American team."

"Oh, I dunno. Raymond Hitchcock, the captain, was no slouch."

"The French team put up a great fight. They had four great players, O'Rourke, Lacey, Duncan Neil and Uriburu. I wish I had been able to see the games."

"Why didn't you?"

"I didn't have the fare to Saratoga."

"What do you think of the yacht races?"

"Yes, but Sir Ramsey Macdonald don't know how to sail her."

"Getting away from sports, did you read about Governor Roosevelt of New Jersey coming out for repeal of the dry law?"

"It's wonderful! Well, he's a chip off the old block. Just like his dad, Teddy Roosevelt!"

AUTUMN

When bodies whiten rapidly as suntans disappear,
When all the color that it took a summer to obtain
Fades swiftly in the indoor life and leaves you pale again;
For weeks you lay upon the beach and let your body bake—
That outdoor look was what you craved, regardless of the ache;
And now, home but a few short weeks, when you undress at night
Migosh! It almost frightens you to see yourself so white!

The height of unimportance: Living in New York a full month and never having a tabloid newspaper report an expected addition to your family.

America may have the faster yacht, but it would be pretty tough to have to wait for mail being carried on either.

"They're breaking the spinaker!" shouted Ima Dodo's boy friend at one of the international races.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Grouping of Federal Buildings on Low Land Criticized as a Mistake.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Lincoln Memorial stands in stately silhouette against the hills and sky. It stands alone and is the center and circumference in its domination of its surroundings.

Suppose there were six or eight buildings of its general character grouped there together like the row houses in some sections of the city; would a monotonous row of marble buildings inspire the emotions that are kindled by the stately pile as we know it?

Yet what are they doing; those who will be responsible to future generations for the placing and spacing of the new Government office buildings?

They are building an ugly row of costly buildings on a reclaimed marsh, the lowest land in the District, with no possible expression of individuality or background. We are spending millions building on an old marshland, and in the centuries to come again will the waters of the Potomac rise and lap these walls, and future generations may well wonder, "Where was the vision of those who built on this mud?"

Those who designed the glories of Greece and Rome felt the divine command, "Lift Up Thine Eyes."

In traveling up the beautiful river Rhine our eyes are not held by the huge palaces on the water front, but by the castles that crown the peaks of the promontories.

Suppose the hills, east of the Anacostia River, reared on their ridges some of these wonderful buildings. Suppose the hills, north of Florida avenue, were crowned with their architectural glory; and picture the waters of the Potomac reflecting white colonnades and facades on the crests of the Virginia hills.

But, you may say, "Separating these office units thus would not make for efficiency." The answer to that is, "Distance is nothing with our modern means of transportation and communication."

Yet, not thinking of the far future, but of the stupendous problem that grouping together these great magnificent office buildings will bring, and is bringing, today, it would help solve the parking problem.

CAPT. A. F. E.

Prof. Gini's Theory That What Ails the World Is Too Much Work, Doesn't Stand Critical Analysis.

To the Editor of The Post: Sir—President Hoover has been telling the country that what it needs is to get down to work and most of the level-headed economists believe that all that is necessary for a return to normal conditions is for the people to forget their fears and go on buying and working as before. Since the country is on a good sound finanical footing that sounds like good sense. But what must we say of Prof. Gini's theory that the world is suffering from too much work.

This Italian professor does not say that all men work too much. The Orientals, he says, work only enough to satisfy the bare creature needs and rudimentary comforts of life, and the Europeans are only interested in the attainment of intellectual, social and cultural pleasures. But that poor fool, the American workman, so his theory runs, works because he has nothing else to do and because he doesn't know when to stop.

This theory is made the basis of Prof. Gini's diagnosis of the world's economic illness. The fondness of Americans for work has resulted in overproduction, he says, and the general result is depression of prices. That is strange. How does he account for the more severe economic depression in Europe? Tariff laws are sufficiently high that a country which worked too much, according to this theory, ought to bring disaster upon itself. But the facts show that the depression is much more serious in Europe than America, and that the American standard of living is far higher. The simple truth is that Americans work because they want to enjoy the comforts of life. Why don't Europe and Asia try that remedy for their ills?

THOMAS W. RAINCROFT.

The Opening of School Puts an Added Responsibility on Motorists to Avoid Injuring Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: School started Monday, which means that there will be thousands of youngsters crossing the streets every morning and evening. Many of these children are very small and the majority of them are careless in respect to watching for approaching automobiles. It is the duty of drivers to be always on the lookout for little tots crossing the streets.

Every year some school children are injured or killed in traffic. It seems to be natural for youngsters to dart across the street. Hence the responsibility of protecting the school children rests upon adult drivers. They must be particularly careful before 9 o'clock and shortly after 3 o'clock, as it is at these hours that the majority of school children are on the streets. ALFRED SANDBOY.

Big Army Tank Tears Up the Street.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The huge Army tank that made a short visit to a spot in front of the Munsey Building Monday did a deal more harm than good. It was brought up the Avenue to the Munsey Building for advertising purposes for the military show that will be staged the 25th, 26th and 27th of this month. It did not tear up the streets en route, but after resting in front of the Munsey Building for a few minutes it was necessary to turn the tank around in order to take it back to Washington Barracks. When the tank made the turn it marred the street paving to such an extent that a crew of workmen appeared Tuesday to repair the damage. Was this advertising stunt worth the damage that it caused? I think the Army could have advertised their show in a manner less damaging and more impressive than the mere five or ten minute appearance of the gigantic tank. B. U. S.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Career Group Finding Favor In Argentine

Foreign Office Scene of Fresh Activity in Buenos Aires.

WITH the new regime in Argentina, diplomats seem to be again finding a place in the sun. Not only has President Uriburu named ambassadors to several foreign capitals—including Washington—in which for a long period diplomatic business has been left in the hands of charges d'affaires, but the new President of Argentina has re-established by decree weekly receptions for the diplomats in the ministry of foreign relations at Buenos Aires, which were abolished by former President Irigoyen. And two days ago he held the first formal reception given at Government House in many months, his guests being ambassadors, ministers and the legation staffs of the 27 countries which have recognized the provisional government.

Two men, who served as envoys to the United States in earlier administrations, have been given ambassadorial posts by President Uriburu, Dr. Don Manuel Malbran, who is to come back to Washington, and Senor Thomas le Breton, who has been appointed Argentine Ambassador to France.

Dr. Malbran, the first diplomat appointed by the new government, is already preparing to start for Washington, where he will be warmly welcomed. He has already a good many friends here, although he had served at Washington only a few weeks when a disagreement with his government over plans for president—then president-elect—Hoover's visit to Argentina precipitated his resignation. He had protested against what he deemed President Irygoyen's discourtesy toward the American President-elect.

Although appointed by the Leguia government, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, Ambassador of Peru to the United States, seems to be in favor with the new government, and from present indications will remain in Washington.

It is on the cards, however, that a new Minister to Colombia will soon be appointed to succeed Dr. Enrique Olaya, now President of Colombia. Since Dr. Olaya left Washington, Senor Don Jose M. Coronado has been serving as charge d'affaires ad interim. But from Bogota comes news that President Olaya has offered the post of Minister to the United States to Senor Camilio C. Restrepo, an old friend, although a member of an opposing political party. Senor Restrepo was first Vice President of Colombia in a previous administration and later Governor of Antioquia, to which post he was reappointed by President Olaya. In case Senor Restropo should decline the post, it is believed that it will be offered to Dr. Fabio Lozano, former Minister to Peru and present secretary of public works.

Hoover Gives Wadsworth Finance Post

Former Capital Man to Aid Dominican Republic.

President Hoover's choice of Mr. Eliot Wadsworth of Boston, as a member of a special mission to work out a financial and reconstruction program for the Dominican Republic, brings into the news the name of an old favorite in Washington. Mr. Wadsworth first came to the Capital back in the days of the World War, when he had an important executive position with the American Red Cross and afterward he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, a post in which he served for several years.

A bachelor when he came to town, Mr. Wadsworth later married Mrs. Guy H. Scull, of New York, the widow of an old friend, and brought his charming wife to Washington. They lived in Georgetown in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, then, as now, away on foreign service; and the couple had an important place in the scheme of things here until Mr. Wadsworth retired from public life. Since then they have been making their home in Boston. For the summer months they have been at Villa Latonia, their seaside home at Eastern Point, Gloucester, Mass.

Washington claims as one of its interesting visitors this week Miss Sue Pollard, the youthful "First Lady of Virginia," who is the guest of Miss Mildred Huston and Miss Catherine Huston, daughters of Mr. Claudius Huston, former chairman of the Republican national committee. The attractive daughter of Virginia's Governor will be in town a week, renewing friendships among the young set and among artists of the dramatic world formed during Miss Pollard's initial step into the realm of the drama in Washington in the winter of 1928-1929.

As Shirley Horton, of the Junior Players, Sue Pollard established an enviable following among the members of Washington society. Some day, she says, when the duties of hostess for the Governor of Virginia are lifted from her shoulders, Miss Pollard will continue her theatrical career.

Gay Parties Planned for Army Show

Round of Teas to Lend Additional Color at Fete.

Remembering that battles sometimes are won over the teacups, society, both official and of the Army, is rallying its forces in a line-up of gay parties to be held daily at the Officers Club to lend additional color to the great military exposition and carnival at the Army War College the last three days of the week. The guests of honor for the series of bridge teas will pour tea, and cards will be the order of the day from 11 until 6 o'clock.

On the opening day Mrs. Charles P. Summerall, wife of the chief of staff, and instigator of the annual exposition, will preside at the tea, with Mrs. Edward Burr assisting. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, with Mrs. Frederic Payne, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, and Mrs. O. M. Lissak will be at the tea tables on Friday. On Saturday Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. William E. Borah and Mrs. Alexander W. Maish, as honor guests, will preside.

The serious business of playing bridge will find its antithesis in a fascinating schedule of crystal gazing, palmistry and other enticing forms of the occult as dispensed by eight of Washington's clever seers who have volunteered their powers of character reading for the benefit of the Army Relief Society. Devotees of the mystic arts may consult these mediums during the afternoons of the three carnival days.

There will be a wheel of chance, fortune telling booths galore, and two graphologists to "look into the future." One of the chirographists will be Mrs. C. C. Smith, wife of Col. Smith of the Adjutant General's department, and one of the women of the Army set versed in this science which she has studied for a number of years.

Mrs. Lutz Wahl, widow of the late Gen. Wahl, and Mrs. Hugh Drum will serve real "ole New Orleans gumba," coffee, and waffles for those who wish to forget the misgivings of an ominous future, in the culinary delights of the present.

Mrs. Wahl and Mrs. Drum will be assisted at their booth by Mrs. Richmond P. Davis, Miss Reaume, Miss Anne Lomax, Mrs. John F. Preston, Mrs. George R. Allin, Mrs. Ben Lear, jr., Mrs. Leon M. Logan, Mrs. James MacKay, Mrs. Frank C. Mahin, Miss Katherine Fredendall, Miss Ruth MacKay, Miss Anna Randell, Miss Jane Crosby, Miss Louise Wilson, Miss Dorothy Wilson, Miss Lelitia Dawson, Miss Gertrude Reiman, Miss Fenella Castenada and Miss Janet Murray.

Mr. and Mrs. Block arrived in New York Monday on the S. S. Bremen after spending the summer in Europe and will take possession of their own house on their return to town.

Dr. and Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson and Miss Betsy Anne Simpson have returned to Washington from their country home, Glen Airlie, and have reopened their apartment at the Wyoming. Miss Frances Simpson left on Thursday for Fairfax Hall, where she attended school last year.

With the appointment of Representative David H. Kincheloe as associate justice of the United States Customs Court, Mr. and Mrs. Kincheloe will make their home in New York, where they have taken an apartment. They expect to leave town on Saturday, but after placing her daughter, Miss Gene Kincheloe, in school, Mrs. Kincheloe will return to Washington to complete the business incident to disposing of their house.

LUCY PARKS in
Back to Town Clothes That Paris Approves—Publishes the 'News in Half Size Fashions'

IN view of the tall and willowy mannequins who model clothes, not to mention the attenuated figures that make the smartest fashion illustrations, it might seem, offhand, that any woman less than 5 feet 7 or 8 inches tall was just out of luck in the matter of achieving a fashionable appearance.

For Shorter Women.

This, as we know, is not at all the case. There is a flourishing half-size fashion business in answer to the demands of women of 5 feet 4 or thereabouts. By this method dresses are reduced in proper proportions so that they lose none of their original chic. Such dresses are made in all sizes—that is to say, to fit the short woman who wears a size 38 or 40, as well as the petite woman who takes a size 14.

Half-Size Corsets.

But more than coats and dresses are included in what is known as half-size fashions. Foundation garments are now to be had in half sizes. Thus the woman of less than average height can secure not only a dress in proportions that meet the requirements of her figure, but can also find corsets in her own proportions and styled in coordination with the current dress silhouette. The majority of corsets designed for short women are of the one-piece variety.

65% of all women in the United States are 5 feet 4 inches tall or under—but the only foundations designed especially for them are these short women's models by REDFERN.

If you are short and have trouble in being perfectly fitted in a Corselette*, don't fail to try one of these garments especially designed for you—

LEAGUE BODY OPENS BRIAND PLAN STUDY

French Minister Appoints Sir Eric Drummond as Committee Secretary.

U. S. COOPERATION SEEN

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Securely within the structure of the League of Nations, M. Aristide Briand's scheme for a federation of European states took another brief step forward today through the organization of an all-European committee of study to inquire into its possibilities.

Under instructions from the league assembly, a special committee of European diplomatic representatives met for the first time in the league council's glass-walled chamber. The French foreign minister, father of the idea, was chosen to be the first chairman of the group, which numbers the spokesmen of 27 nations.

Finding his committee still closer to the league and to the idea of universality, M. Briand designated Sir Eric Drummond, chief of the league's secretariat, to be the secretary of the new committee. The committee agreed to the chairman's suggestion that his memorandum of May 17, in which he set forth fully his ideas of European cooperation under political direction, together with the governments' replies thereto, should be used as the first textbook.

Fears Are Banished.

The committee decided to assemble for the first regular session next January at the time of the council session. Thus in launching its study the group tied itself with several bonds to the league organization, thereby intending to banish the fears of those who felt that such a European union might be in some manner against the interests of another continent or country.

The committee during its session of about half an hour acknowledged the authority given it by the assembly to seek the cooperation of other nations, even non-European, in pursuing its study. This point will be elaborated at the January meeting.

Cooperation of U. S.

Wellinformed persons said this recognition was not a gesture, but a real desire to have the United States and other countries outside of Europe help Europe to solve her problems. Many of the delegates have protested that Europe's prosperity or poverty are the concern of the whole world.

It is believed that the American Government and others will be given opportunity to send observers and advisers so that the "best minds" may be employed toward formation of the proposed union.

It was assumed tonight that the second regular meeting of the new group would coincide with the council session in May, when many European ministers regularly meet at Geneva.

Naval Dirigible Sails Over City

Los Angeles Pays Visit to Washington During Training Cruise.

Making an unheralded journey over Washington, the Navy dirigible Los Angeles cruised leisurely over the White House, and the downtown section about 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and was viewed by thousands.

Its arrival coinciding almost exactly with the closing hour at the Government buildings, the glittering cigar-shaped craft droned down to an altitude of only several hundred feet, swung about after a few minutes and headed off in a northerly direction toward its base at Lakehurst, N. J.

Naval Communications reported that the Los Angeles was on a training cruise and had flown here after soaring over Annapolis and the upper Chesapeake Bay section. The previous night it journeyed as far south as Havre de Gras before returning to its mast.

Both were held at the Sixth Precinct Station on charges of possession. Bayles was also charged with operating without a permit and with dead license tags.

VETERANS' BUREAU MEN ARE INDICTED

Three Stationed in Capital Among Five Accused on Three Counts.

TWO FROM RICHMOND

Special to The Washington Post.

Saluda, Va., Sept. 23—Five men affiliated with the United States Veterans' Bureau, including three stationed in Washington and two stationed in Richmond, today were indicted here by a Middlesex grand jury on charges of uttering a forgery, perjury and subornation of perjury. Their cases are slated for the November term of court.

They include Paul S. Kramer, an official in the Washington office and former attorney for the bureau in Richmond; E. E. Odom, national guardianship officer of the bureau in Washington; Thomas L. Eggleston, jr., legal supervisor of the bureau in Washington; Earl S. Bailey, chief of the insurance division, and Thomas D. Haskins, field examiner, both in the Richmond office.

The charges arose from testimony and documents purported to have been used in the April term of Middlesex Circuit Court when the Veterans Bureau succeeded in having Robert Thomas, of Richmond, removed as committee for George Brooks, Negro, an insane World war veteran.

Maj. William Wolff Smith, general counsel of the Veterans' Bureau, yesterday said that Robert Thomas was a former regional attorney of the Bureau and that upon resigning the lawyer went into private practice. Maj. Smith said that Mr. Thomas then became committee for veterans with large estates. In refusing to turn over money to Mr. Thomas, the bureau instituted the legal action in the Midlesex court.

Mr. Kramer, now attorney in the office of the bureau's general counsel here, said that he would plead "not guilty" to the charges filed yesterday.

Mr. Odom, the only other defendant among the five who could be located, denied the charges made against the group.

Wife Charges Cruelty In Action for Alimony

Charging that her husband had attempted to strangle her and asserting she feared he would kill her while she slept, Helen Rosaline Smith, of Eighth street northeast near F street, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to grant her a limited divorce and permanent alimony from James Robert Smith, of H street northwest near Sixth street.

The couple married November 14, 1925, and have two children whose custody the wife seeks. Mrs. Smith tells the court that she and her husband were separated last March 15 when she was unable to longer stand his alleged cruelty. The break-up, she states, came after he had locked her in the house. She also states that her husband threatened to burn her clothing and that when she went to get it and the children she was accompanied by two policemen for protection. Attorney M. E. Roggan appears for the wife.

A fact you should not overlook
MORE red-cells in the blood! Good health and resistance to infection and disease, depend on that. If a lowered red-cell count is allowed to continue, ANEMIA often results.
S.S.S. should be your safeguard. A hundred years of experience has proved its usefulness in building red-cells in the blood. Take it before meals. Millions of people have found it the easiest and surest way to restore their red-blood-cells. The appetite picks up, the whole body is strengthened, invigorated! Get S.S.S.—take it and possess a wonderful power of new life and vitality. Ask for the large size. At all drug stores.

How to recognize a low blood count
Blood is Life! You cannot count your own red-blood-cells—that is technical! But you should know that they are the "ships" that sail in the blood and carry nourishment to all parts of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues.
You can recognize a lowered count by the way you look and feel—such as body weakness, lack of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, boils and pimples. They may indicate that you need S.S.S.
S.S.S.—the great blood tonic—stimulates the blood-building organs to supply the necessary red-cells. If your vitality and clear skin are slipping away from you, try S.S.S.

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to every cubic millimeter.
(Right) Anemic red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh.

A Life Insurance Trust
Will Greatly Assist Your Insurance In Accomplishing Its Vital Purpose
Back of practically every purchase of life insurance there is a purpose which reveals a real need for this protection. It may be to free the home from debt, to provide education for the children, to stabilize liquid values of assets, or to create an estate.
Yet if the policies provide for the payment of the proceeds in a lump sum to beneficiaries who are inexperienced in handling large amounts, this money may find its way into the paths of destructive forces and suffer unnecessary shrinkage.
The first requisite is that you carry a sufficient amount of life insurance; the second points out that you be certain your insurance will accomplish its true purpose. This can be arranged through a Life Insurance Trust which the American Security and Trust Company is equipped to administer, and in which you specify fixed amounts to be paid at definite times for certain purposes.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

FOR AN EARLY SPRING START.

THE scotch plaid days of late September, when the weather is so balmy, is a splendid time to be in the open as much as possible, and while there is no immediate need of haste, as in the spring, when hours are so precious, it is well to prepare for the dreary days perhaps not far ahead.

This is the time to gather our covering material for all hardy borders, to put on after the ground is frozen. Clean up remnants of the year's crops, making the place clean and tidy, with everything in readiness for a quick start next year.

Newly planted specimen evergreens will need some protection during the coming months, so we should now be collecting pine and spruce branches for this purpose. Later these branches can be worked into a network of wire attached to posts driven into the ground about the plants, which is preferable to driving the ends of the cut branches into the ground. Some amateurs attempt the protection of these dwarf trees by wrapping straw about them. This can be done, but it requires more skill than any one not versed in the care of evergreens is likely to have, the reason being that if you use too much straw you thus interfere with the free circulation of air through the branches. Damp rot is sure to be preferred to wrapping with straw, but protection with pine and spruce branches is preferable to either.

Most evergreens, and particularly those which need protection during the winter, have a greater quantity of surface roots than other trees, which makes mulching essential to protect them from freezing and thaw- manure with plenty of litter in it forms an ideal protection. Peat moss is also an excellent mulch for evergreens.

This is also a good time to get ready to set out deciduous trees. These can be planted as long as the ground remains open, which in some parts of our country is all winter.

Should we have early frosts in the northern parts of the country and the ground freeze before our hardy lily bulbs arrive, do not worry, merely gather up the bulbs and winter them in a cold frame. Water them regularly though not as frequently as in the summer season. They can not make any root growth in dry soil, whereas if watered properly, they will make roots and thus be well equipped to make a splendid showing of growth when spring arrives.

Jane Interprets the Mode

Coat of purple and fine white wool mixture trimmed with grey fox, skirt of the coat material and interesting blouse of purple shantung and wool, delicately embroidered. (Courtesy of Maggy Rouff, Paris.)

Paris, September 23.

AND now boudoir pajamas are no longer of satins and crepes, but of soft woolen materials! Which if you ask me, is very practical, and comfortable, especially for certain countries that don't indulge in steam heat in quite the way we do in these United States.

These pajama suits remind me of the tailored bathrobes that emancipated young women used to go in for a few years ago. But like everything else that has improved with age, these smart two or three-piece pajamas have it all over their humble dressing gown ancestors.

• • • •

The really new fur trimming of the day is beaver. But beaver has to be carefully handled in order for it not to look heavy and bulky. I would like to predict a rising interest in the humble mole as trimming, although to date scarcely a scrap of it appears in this form. I predict it for the very simple reason that it is a soft, gracious fur, and of an acceptable and practical color.

• • • •

How true it is that a black dress has to be very well made, or it is nothing! One has but to see a few really smart black dresses, at Patou's for instance or at Maggy Rouff's, to understand once and forever what a black dress has to be in order to Be.

• • • •

Hand embroidered batiste, ninon and muslin, or chiffon and lace, or hand hemmed crepe de chine—that's what tea aprons are made of these happy days! And that's the reason no doubt why all the chic French ladies have gone wild over wearing them and spent hours, positively hours, looking for oportunities to don one.

You'll do exactly the same thing, after you have sent a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post, for the twelve tea apron designs we have made for you this week. And don't forget that these make a delightful gift, the very thing to keep in a gift box against that unexpected need!

• • • •

A couple of very charming fur muffs have made their annual winter appearance chez Patou. So if you are muff-minded, you may carry one with perfect assurance that is, after you have practiced how to carry one, which is quite something else again!

• • • •

Maggy Rouff is one of the French couturiers who knows to perfection how to envelope the feminine figure in a seemingly careless way which is very flattering and comfortable looking, the while it does not look the least bit bulky or shapeless—I mean the gown, not the figure.

Well, you can better see what I mean by looking at today's ensemble from this house, and noting the loose drapy effect of the coat which by the way was in a purple tweed with very fine white thread in the material These threads necessarily gave the purple a slightly silverish look, which was heightened by the gray fox collar.

And the blouse was unusually interesting, being developed of purple shantung embroidered in wool eyelet effects, and plain wool.

• • • •

Of course you're looking in each Sunday's Washington Post for the weekly Dare fashion letter. Don't you enjoy it?

Au revoir!

What Today Means to You

"LIBRA."

IF September 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. from 3:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from noon to 2 p. m.

You will have to create your own difficulties on this date, as the astrological influences will assist and not hinder you in your plans. Affairs of sentiment will mark the evening hours, and there is a probable betrothal. A lucky time for changes and investments.

The children born on this September 24 will have secretive and reserved natures, and they will do things in a cool and calculated fashion. They will have considerable assurance, good intellects, common sense and refinement. They will not make friends easily, but will stick loyally to those whom they consider as such.

You suffer through your moods, and it is needless to say that your companions do also. Today you may be a delightful, spontaneous, talkative companion—an eupeptic person. Tomorrow, you may be a silent, morose creature with an atrabilious temperament. It is not the big catastrophes of your life which plunge you into the Slough of Despond, but usually something of almost microscopic unimportance, which has been signified by your own self-love and self-pity. You should conquer your spells of needless misery, for they are both foolish and selfish, and at times almost unforgivable.

You have a critical and discriminative nature, and you are not easily satisfied. You have high ambitions, and work very hard, and sacrifice a great deal for their fulfillment. You are rather inclined to want to do everything yourself, but are only fitted for a one man or woman job. Your superior attitude precludes your success in handling subordinates. You are a hard taskmaster for yourself, and you seldom give up until you are satisfactorily finished, no matter how great your physical or mental fatigue may be.

You will be inclined to place the man or woman of your heart on a pedestal, and woe be unto them when they fall off—which they ultimately will have to do. You are not a very understanding or tolerant companion, although you will become more so with the passing of the years.

Successful people born September 24:

Zachary Taylor, twelfth President of United States.
William E. Burton, actor.
Charles Steedman, naval officer.
Mark A. Hanna, U. S. senator.
J. Horace McFarland, master printer.

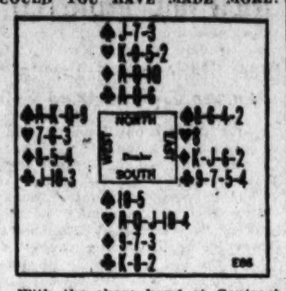
36,158 Britons Get Jobs.

London, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—A slight decrease in unemployment was shown in figures officially announced by the British ministry of labor today. The total unemployed on September 15 stood at 2,103,413, which is 36,158 less than the previous week. The total is still 955,894 more than a year ago.

WORK ON BRIDGE

COULD YOU HAVE MADE MORE?



With the above hand at Contract, South bid one Heart, West one Spade, and North jumped to four Hearts which obtained the contract.

At Auction, North would bid only two Hearts on the first round and East would bid two Spades; that, however, would be as far as East and West would go, and South would obtain the contract at three Hearts.

Played at Hearts, West led three rounds of Spades, the first two winning and the third forcing South. South then led three rounds of trumps, exhausting the adverse trumps and leaving one in the dummy and one in the closed hand. After that, South led a Diamond and finessed the Ten, but East won with the Jack and led up to the Ace and Queen of Clubs. South took the trick with the King of Clubs and led another Diamond, but the finesse went wrong a second time and the Declarer lost four tricks, failing to go game.

Could you have made more?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The Declarer might have avoided a very simple error. He was quite right in drawing the three trumps because dummy had nothing that he desired to ruff, and would be left with a long trump after the three leads. But after extracting the trumps he should have led three rounds of Clubs, winning the third in the closed hand; and then have led a Diamond and finessed the Ten. Of course it would have lost, but that would have been immaterial. East would have had to lead a Diamond up to the Ace-Queen in dummy, or to have led some other suit which one of Declarer's hands could ruff and on which the other could discard. Game would have been made in either instance.

Of temper and of sight,
Yet thinks because his hair is long
His average is just right.

But in one thing I'm one with him—
This Goofus loves his rest!

Prince of Wales May Serve as Godfather

London, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales probably will be one of the godfathers at the christening of the infant, Princess Margaret Rose, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York. Unofficial reports today said the Archbishop of Canterbury probably will perform the ceremony, which will be private.

The baby probably will wear her first ceremonial dress on this occasion, this being an old lace one used at successive royal christenings since the days of Queen Victoria. The Prince of Wales and other children of King George have been among the wearers and the new baby's elder sister, Princess Elizabeth, also was baptized in it.

BUTLER HITS BACK AT CAMPBELL TALE

Former Senator Alleges That He Is Placed in False Position.

ADMITS TAKING CASES

Former Senator Marion Butler, of North Carolina, now a Washington attorney, in a formal statement yesterday, took vigorous issue with statements concerning him made by Maj. Maurice Campbell in The Post last Wednesday.

Characterizing allegations of Maj. Campbell as "cowardly attacks," he censured the former prohibition administrator for publishing "confidential and official information, which he had no right to abstract from official files." He likewise charged that Maj. Campbell misquoted official records and garbled facts.

Cases Are Mentioned.

"In his article published on September 17, he attempts to attack me about the cases of some of my clients," declared Mr. Butler. "One was the Williamsburg Barber Supply Co. He had cited this permittee for revocation on the report of two prohibition agents, to the effect that on a certain date, when a truck load of alcohol, which had been ordered by the permittee, and which the permittee reported that he had received on that day, was not that day delivered to the permittee, but was diverted to the bootleg trade."

"They said agents gave as their reason for making the charge that they had rented a room on the same street and had occupied the same all of that date and had watched permittee's premises and that no alcohol had been delivered."

Mr. Butler, in his statement, recalled that in this case he had put on the witness stand a city engineer, a policeman on the beat of the company's building and another disinterested person to prove that the window from which the dry agents gazed lacked 8½ feet of possessing a view of the structure's front door, through which the alcohol barrels were rolled, he added.

Permit Was Revoked.

Mr. Butler said that Maj. Campbell nevertheless revoked the permit and that an appeal was taken to the Federal Prohibition Commissioner, who promptly ordered the permit restored, he declared.

"Maj. Campbell, in his effort to justify his action, grossly mistakes the evidence. He attempts to criticize me for appealing the case to Washington, and also criticizes the Commission of Prohibition for reversing him and ordering the permit restored. He had to distort the facts and suppress the most vital evidence to give him any shadow of excuse for making such criticism. Everybody knows that a permittee had a right to appeal from the decision of an administrator. Indeed, it was my duty to appeal the case. Every lawyer is expected to exhaust his remedy in the department before appealing to the courts.

"But in this connection he says that he asked me, after he had revoked the permit, why I did not take the courts, and that I replied 'that I had a better way.' The dishonest and sneaking purposes of this statement is obvious. But the only comment which it deserves is that I brand it as an unmitigated falsehood."

Butte Not to Run For Governorship

Texan, Now in Washington, Withdraws Name as G. O. P. Nominee.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Dr. George C. Butte, of Austin, nominated by Texas Republicans for governor, declined today to remain in the race, withdrawing his name in a letter read to the State executive committee, meeting here in special session.

Dr. Butte said he was "thoroughly convinced" he was "not now the logicaal candidate" and expressed his conviction that "a more effective candidate is available." He also revealed he had sent in his resignation from a place on the ballot prior to the State Republican convention at San Angelo two weeks ago, but the convention declined to accept it.

The committee appointed a subcommittee to recommend a candidate to succed Dr. Butte. Dr. Butte, now in Washington serving as a special assistant to the solicitor general of the United States, was the Republican nominee for governor in 1924. He was defeated by Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson.

Death of Pair Believed Murder-Suicide Case

Chicago, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Aldridge C. Van Patten, 50, and his wife, Maude, were found shot to death in their bedroom today when the janitor of their apartment called police Van Patten, a credit manager of Armour & Co., is believed to have killed his wife and himself. The couple had no children.

Van Patten left a note assuring Mrs. Ethel Kingsley, of Waverly, Ohio, his sister, that he had no financial worries. Fellow employes said he had been concerned over the illness of his wife. His note to Mrs. Kingsley said, "It is unfair to Maud to leave her alone," and that "overwork and worry have done it."

RAIDS IN NEW YORK CLUBS

questioned closely at the hotel, his talk of business in Denver allayed suspicion.

He knew liquor was being sold at the Helen Morgan Club, but it was a long time before he could make a buy there. One night, getting out of a taxicab at the club, Mrs. White dropped a package containing a bottle of liquor, which broke and ran out on the sidewalk. She showed much dismay at this apparent accident and when news of the calamity was heard inside the club, it aroused sympathy. White for the first time was sold liquor.

Don't get the idea that it was difficult to obtain liquor in these night clubs. But since the first Helen Morgan raid they had become more cautious and wanted to know their customers' identities

Woman's Health Broken.

The Whites got to be on good terms with the night club people. Texas and Tommy Guinan, Arthur Gordoni, Helen Morgan and others used to go to see them in their hotel. Mrs. White was a great help to her husband. She never took a drink during this time, but the continual round of gayety and nervous strain broke her health, and she returned to Denver a very sick woman.

Jacob E. Erkilla, of Detroit; S. David Beazell, from Kansas City; Lon M. Tyson, from Texas, and John J. Mitchell, from Denver, were the other men on this case. White introduced them at the clubs.

They communicated with me daily by private telephone wire, reporting their activities, and occasionally Moss or I met them for conferences in taxicabs or automobiles, riding through the streets. They never appeared at the prohibition office.

They were clever, Mitchell especially. There were two night clubs in the same building and the agents believed they had the same kitchen, from which liquor was served. If this could be established, the conspiracy would be widened.

Fourth Plate of Soup.

One night—I think it was in the Jungle Club—Mitchell pretended to be half seas over and hungry. He ordered soup. He ate the soup with gusto and vociferous enthusiasm.

"That's the best soup I ever ate," he proclaimed, with a smile that took everybody around him into his confidence. "Bring me another plate."

Mitchell ordered and ate three plates of soup, each time becoming more conspicuously enthusiastic. The manager was laughing at him, but Mitchell was deadly serious. He arose and announced:

"That's the best soup I ever tasted, I want to see the man that made that soup."

On his insistence he was taken to the kitchen to meet the chef.

"I want to see that soup made!" he announced, and sat himself down until it was done. He saw the liquor being taken into both night clubs and later was able to testify to it.

But he paid for his curiosity. For when the chef had finished making the soup he insisted that Mitchell eat a fourth plate.

Alarm on Eve of Raids.

As the day of the raid approached the situation became more tense. I nearly had heart failure. A leak would have ruined everything. We were preparing the cases in Washington for secrecy's sake. On the day before the raid Mitchell telephoned me and said he must see me at once. I drove along Lexington avenue and picked him up and we drove through Central Park. He told me he was afraid the game was up. In the Frivolity Club the night before they had refused to sell him liquor, even accused him of being a prohibition agent, but he had laughed it off. The fears turned out to be groundless, for I put Tyson and his wife in that club that night and they had no trouble.

These men were all going around with their own wives. We were empowered to hire women for this purpose, but I never did it if I could avoid it. It almost always causes trouble.

Mrs. Willebrandt had arranged for Judge Coleman to sign the search warrants. Morrison and my investigators worked on them for two days prior to the raids in a room in the Hotel Vanderbilt and we hoped to have them before the judge at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. But they were not ready and I went down and sat with the judge in his chambers. He waited patiently for hours.

I had evidence against 35 clubs and wanted to raid them all the same night, but found I had not men enough. I borrowed ten agents from Col. Wynne in Philadelphia. They reached New York at 8 p. m. and were taken to a hotel to dress in evening clothes. They went out that night with the investigators and at the time of the raid were in various clubs with the investigators, but had no idea there was to be raiding that night.

Meeting Purpose Masked.

How was I to get all my men together without arousing suspicion? My assistants thought it could not be done. Finally I hit on an idea. All the agents were interested in the civil service situation and whether or not they were going to keep their jobs. I put up a notice for them to assemble on the night of June 28 and I would discuss the civil service situation with them. In the interim the office was agog with curiosity, but there was not the slightest suspicion of the real purpose of the meeting.

When they had all assembled, some 200 of them, I told them all telephone wires were cut and that a man at the door was instructed to let no one out, not even me. I told them I knew no more about civil service then they did, but they were going to raid. When I mentioned the Helen Morgan Club there was a burst of cheering and handclapping. They knew the experience I had had on the first raid.

Every other time I got a large group of agents together the news floated uptown as a warning. But this night there was none of that. Everybody had been too much concerned about the civil service.

I had drawn up a complete plan of operation, like a military movement, with each man assigned to a post. At 12:30 a. m. I started the men out in squads, with orders to raid at 1 o'clock. I first warned each squad and each man for their individual protection to keep elbows touching until they had reached the night club to which they had been assigned.

The plan worked perfectly. The only disappointment I had was that Texas Guinan was not in her club at the time of the raid and that Helen Morgan gave an agent the slip when he let her go into a dressing room. They both surrendered later in the day at my insistence.

Indictments Dissussed.

Mr. Tuttle first heard about the raids when he read about them in the newspapers. We did not confer about them until July 13, when he called me up and said he would like to have lunch with me. At lunch, in the Hotel Vanderbilt, he was quite affable and showed a disposition to cooperate in the prosecutions. Then we went over to my office and talked things over with Morrison. Tuttle advised that we go before the grand jury at once and obtain indictments for conspiracy. Morrison wanted to file an information, then he wanted indictments for nuisance; but Tuttle (quite contrary to his position in the first Helen Morgan case) insisted that conspiracy indictments would be the thing. It was finally agreed that Tuttle should have his assistant, Watts, prepare for the grand jury the next week, and Morrison would present the cases.

In these raids I had seized a large quantity of records which showed that hundreds of New Yorkers had charge accounts for liquor bought in night clubs. Morrison and Leslie Salter, who had been sent from Washington to assist him, decided to subpena a large number of these to testify about their purchases. On August 20 between 50 and 60 New Yorkers appeared at the Federal Building in response to subpenas. Morrison examined four of them before the grand jury.

Then Tuttle got wind of what was going on and made a terrible row. He ordered all this procedure discontinued, and would only permit the questioning of these night club patrons in an informal way. He issued a statement to the newspapers disclaiming all responsibility and declaring he would not permit such an indignity to be put upon reputable citizens.

I am convinced that if this procedure had been allowed to continue, Morrison and Salter would have succeeded in obtaining convictions on conspiracy indictments.

Peace Parley Arranged.

The newspaper comments on the disagreement between Tuttle and Morrison were so serious that on August 24 I thought I might ease the situation and telephoned to Tuttle asking him to have lunch with Morrison and me. We lunched at the Lawyers Club, but before this I talked with Tuttle in his office and he told me he had to do what he did about the subpenaing in order to protect the citizens of New York. I told him that the so-called "hippodrome," when the night club patrons were summoned, had been caused by publicity, and that if the calling of witnesses had been kept secret there would have been no hippodrome.

At lunch the three of us called a truce. Tuttle said he had promised the newspapermen that he would issue a statement when he got back, but both Morrison and I thought this unwise. My purpose had been to let the newspapermen see us walking out of the building arm in arm. After lunch Tuttle told the reporters that everything was harmonious again, and I referred to the three of us as the Three Musketeers, "all for one and one for all." But the newspapers took it that Tuttle had won his fight against Mrs. Willebrandt.

Those were strenuous times. Tuttle showed resentment at the sending of Assistant Attorneys General to prosecute cases in which he had no voice. In consideration for Mr. Tuttle's dignity it was agreed that he should prosecute the first case, that against the Ferndale Club. Tuttle failed to get convictions on the conspiracy charge, but obtained adequate sentences for nuisance and contempt. Morrison and Salter handled the rest of the cases, and Watts later obtained padlocks.

Charges Modified.

After one or two attempts it became apparent that there was little likelihood of any jury in New York convicting on a conspiracy charge, so it was decided to dismiss this charge and proceed for nuisance, sale and possession.

Of course it is possible that the publicity given the night club cases had some influence on the jurymen. There had been so much talk of them as a political coup by Mrs. Willebrandt and there had been the fight over the subpenas.

Then there had been a story emanating from the Federal Building and featured in the newspapers that the investigators squandered $75,000 in obtaining the evidence. They were pictured as big butter and egg men having a grand time on the taxpayers' money. Actually they spent about $9,000, less than half the amount of the fines which resulted. When I announced this it received much less attention than the wild $75,000 tale. I remember how surprised the officials in Washington were when they learned the actual expenses. Their estimates had been about $40,000 or $50,000.

Of course there were sad disappointments. Helen Morgan was acquitted. Texas Guinan went free triumphantly and sent a box of orchids to Agent White, who had denied sending any to her or even knowing what an orchid was.

But the prosecutions obtained the excellent results I have summarized above. Besides these 20 the agents made 15 other night club cases, which were left in Mr. Tuttle's hands.

I have often wondered what disposition was made of these remaining 15 cases.

Tomorrow Maj. Campbell will tell about the night club case in which immunity forestalled criminal prosecution.

HOOVER COMMISSION TO FACE DRY ISSUE

IS STILL OPEN-MINDED

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission will be faced with the proposition that it pass judgment on the prohibition problem when it reconvenes October 8.

Kenneth Mackintosh, a former Washington State Supreme Court justice and a dry, said yesterday he would insist that the commission, of which he is a member, "go to the guts of the prohibition question."

Mr. Mackintosh, who has been studying exhaustive reports on crime and prohibition with the commission for more than a year, wants the commission to say whether the dry law is enforceable and if it is not, what could be done about it.

He is convinced the commission will seek to meet the issue which he regards as one of the most outstanding economic and social problems since the question of slavery. He also is convinced that ten men and one woman on the commission are still of an open mind on the controversy awaiting study of the final reports.

New and comprehensive reports on prohibition, touching almost every conceivable phase of the question, await the attention of the membership. Mr. Mackintosh said these reports are "interesting and illuminating."

No proposition is now before the commission from any of its members proposing either modification or repeal of the dry law. Persistent reports that the commisson favors modfication to permit light wines and beer are scoffed at in commission headquarters. It is recalled that Chairman Wickersham himself last spring asserted that he did not believe the American taste regarded 2.75 per cent beer as "authoritative."

Chairman Wickersham has given notice several times that the commission is not going to report on whether "prohibition is or is not a desirable thing for the country." However, he has said the commssion has held the view that if it finds the law can not be enforced or that it can be enforced that should be stated.

Aimee McPherson Gets $5,000 Under Will

DRY CHIEF, CLEARED, MAY GET NEW JOB

Lyle Can Return, Senator Jones Says; Woodcock Not So Sure.

TO INVESTIGATE FIRST

Seattle, Sept. 22 (A.P.).—Senator Wesley L. Jones said last night that Roy C. Lyle, former Northwest prohibition administrator, acquitted of corruption and bribery charges, would be reinstated automatically in the Federal prohibition enforcement service if he so desired.

Earl Corwin, another acquitted defendant, said he would demand immediate reinstatement as a dry agent.

Senator Jones said Lyle's position was governed by civil service rules and although the post he held no longer existed since enlargement of the Pacific Northwest division under the Department of Justice organization, he no doubt would receive the equivalent rating. William M. Whitney, suspended assistant administrator, and Corwin were not under civil service rules. R. L. Pryant, the fourth defendant acquitted, had left the prohibition force to become a deputy sheriff here before he was indicted.

Lyle said he has no immediate plans for the future.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—There is no vacancy in the Prohibition Bureau at Seattle for Roy C. Lyle, former administrator recently acquitted of bribery charges, but should one occur and Lyle makes application for it he will receive the same consideration as any other applicant, Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, national director of prohibition, said here tonight.

Col. Woodcock explained that Lyle, under temporary suspension from the prohibition forces of the Treasury Department since July 1, 1930, when prohibition enforcement was transferred to the Department of Justice had never been an administrator in his department and that he already had a Department of Justice administrator at Seattle.

He said he knew nothing of Lyle's case and had never met Lyle, but should he make application for a position he would be "investigated with the same thoroughness that all applicants are investigated by the Department of Justice."

"I do not want to prejude Lyle's case," Col. Woodcock declared. "I am working to bring about higher standards in the prohibition forces, and if Lyle makes application for a position and he does not come up to these higher standards he will not be given the position."

Col. Woodcock is here on an inspection trip.

WILL REFUEL AT DAWN

Harbor Grace, New Foundland, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The transatlantic airplane Columbia, piloted by Capt. Erroll Boyd and Lieut. Harry Connor, alighted here at Sunset tonight, poised to cross the ocean to London tomorrow morning if the weather remained favorable.

The fliers landed at 4:30 p. m., (E. S. T.), just 4 hours and 22 minutes after taking off from Charlottetown, P. E. I., where they had been held over for ten days because of bad weather. They took off originally from Montreal.

The fliers estimated it would take them only 22 hours to reach London and were anxious to have the plane refueled tonight. Airport officials ruled against that proceeding. Refueling will start at dawn tomorrow.

Boyd said the Columbia was in great condition and should take to the dangerous space above the North Atlantic as well as it did when Clarence Chamberlin took it to Germany from New York. The Columbia also was used by Mable Boll in her unsuccessful attempt.

The fliers said today's flight was uneventful. The Columbia attained an average speed of 111 miles per hour.

DEATH CONFESSION IS BELIEVED FALSE

Discrepancies Are Found in Story of Slaying of 8-Year-Old Girl.

WILL BE REQUESTIONED

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Doubt was expressed today by South Bend police in the authenticity of alleged confessions made by George Sherman Myers, 40-year-old former convict, held at the State prison for the slaying here on August 27 of 8-year-old Marverine Appell.

Early this morning Myers was said to have confessed to Sheriff Thomas A. Goodrick and to prison authorities that he attacked the child and then killed her. Sheriff Goodrick expressed the belief that Myers was telling the truth, but police officers said Myers had steadfastly denied to them that he was implicated in the crime.

Coroner B. B. Crumpacker, accompanied by Prosecutor Harry S. Taylor and police officers, went to the prison again this afternoon to question Myers further. Myers was taken to the prison under heavy guard early this morning as a precaution against mob violence.

Discrepancies Are Found.

When Coroner Crumpacker and the South Ben officers left the prison after questioning Myers, they said Warden Walter H. Daly had enjoined them to secrecy. It was intimated, however, that some discrepancies had been found between the confessions made by Myers and actual details of the child's murder.

The officers said they would ask an order for the return of Myers to South Bend so that he might be questioned still further.

Myers was arrested last Saturday. He protested his innocence until caught in a conflict of stories. Then, authorities said today, he made a detailed confession.

He said he frequently met the little girl on the street and that an acquaintanceship resulted. Malverine got in the habit of saying, "Hello, George," and they often stopped to talk.

Lured to Barn.

On the night of August 27, he said, he met the girl, lured her to a barn, attacked and killed her. He left the body in the barn, he said, for two days. Finally, at night, he removed it, placing it where it would be discovered by motorists.

Myers was unable to explain the emotion that possessed him to commit the crime. He expressed willingness to plead guilty. Conviction carries the death penalty.

Extra guards were placed about the county jail until early today when, to avoid the danger of mob violence, he was removed to the jail at Michigan City.

BODY FOUND IN BAY NOT THAT OF JUDGE

Crater Mystery Persists as Description of Corpse Fails to Tally.

QUIZ CONTINUES TODAY

New York, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—For a brief time today officials believed they had found a gruesome answer to the mysterious disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater, but the case was soon back on its old footing of complete mystery.

A body that drifted ashore at Fort Wadsworth on Staten Island tallied in some particulars with the description of Justice Crater. For one thing, the right index finger was mutilated, and Justice Crater was known to have injured his right index finger shortly before he disappeared August 6.

But a doctor from the medical examiner's office established that the damage to the finger of the body found today was done after death while it floated in the bay. And it was also determined that the body had a full set of teeth, whereas Justice Crater had none.

Tomorrow the grand jury inquiry into the disappearance is to be resumed and Frederick Johnson, the jurist's secretary, is to be recalled for further examination. Another witness was expected to be Leo Lowenthal, bodyguard to United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, who conducted an investigation before the Crater disappearance was made public. Senator Wagner, a friend of the missing judge, testified yesterday.

Adams, Frisch and Mancusco had four safeties apiece. Two of Mancusco's were doubles and one of Frisch's. Klein collected three singles and a double for the Phils.

About 5,000 saw the tiff that practically clinched things for the Red Birds.

A season record for base hits in a nine-inning game was established as the Cards gathered 26 solid blows from the offerings of four Philly throwers. The humble Phils did some heavy hitting on their own part, driving Flint Rhem from the mound and continuing a sporadic attack against Lindsey and Hallahan for a total of 16 hits.

Cards Forge Into Early 11-Run Lead.

Phil Collins started on the mound for Philadelphia, but gave way in the third inning as the Cards batted around, collecting eight hits and six runs. Elliott, Benge and Hansen split the remaining work without doing much to check the Cardinal slugging.

The Cards piled up an 11-to-0 lead in the first three innings before Tony Rensa put the Phils into the scoring with a home run with the bases loaded, and through the latter part of the game they did not exert themselves to hold down the Philly score.

Frisch, Mancuso, Adams and Klein led the base hit parade with four wallops apiece. The two teams piled up ten doubles.

Wild Bill Hallahan was the most effective of the St. Louis Pitchers despite the Phillies' five-run ninth inning. He fanned five men and tightened up when the Phils threatened to overtake the league leaders. Most of the final Philly rally was due to the failure of the Cards to make any effort to stop their base runners.

ROBINS EASY AS GIANTS COP, 8-2

New Yorkers Now in Virtual Tie for Third Place.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The New York Giants eliminated Brooklyn from the 1930 National League pennant race today and drew practically even with the Robins in the struggle for third place as they won the last clash of the season between the two clubs, 8—2. It was Brooklyn's sixth straight defeat and left the Robins five games behind the league leading St. Louis Cardinals with only four to play.

The game was tied until the fifth inning when Dazzy Vance was nicked for four Giant runs after Finn had dropped Gilbert's throw to second on what appeared to be a certain double play. The Dazzler gave five hits in that frame before Watson Clark relieved him. The Giants continued scoring, tallying twice in the sixth and bringing in Jim Elliott to finish the game for the Robins.

Wright's 24th Homer Ties Score.

Glenn Wrights' twenty-fourth four-bagger tied the score at 1—1 just before the Giant storm broke while Babe Herman clouted his thirty-fifth in the eighth inning. Lindstrom and Hogan had four-baggers among the Giant's fifteen hits. Lindy led the hitting with four blows in five times at bat. The Giants are now only one point behind the Robins, virtually tied with them for third place. They have two more to play.

Hornsby Named Manager of Cubs for '31; Appointment Verified by Owner Wrigley

Magnate Denies Any Break With Joe McCarthy.

Disappointment of Not Winning Flag Led to Change.

ROGERS HORNSBY.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Crestfallen because his obsession of a world championship team had been thwarted again, William Wrigley, jr., today verified reports that Rogers Hornsby had been picked to succeed Joe McCarty as manager of his Cubs in 1931.

His announcement, although anticipated because of the Cubs' failure in the 1929 world series and their apparent failure in the 1930 National League race, sent Cub fans into an excited huddle. Many believed he had made a mistake while others believed that Hornsby is the man to help him realize his baseball dream.

No Disagreement With McCarthy.

Owner Wrigley insisted that there had been no disagreement between himself, Cub officials and Manager McCarthy. He merely stated that he wanted a world's championship baseball team, that he had been disappointed, that McCarthy had agreed with him that perhaps he had been manager long enough, and that he decided to offer Hornsby the managership.

Hornsby will be offered the position as soon as the National League season ends and there is no doubt in Owner Wrigley's mind that he will accept it. McCarthy's five-year contract expires at the end of this season.

"I realize that Joe McCarthy is one of baseball's greatest managers, but I must have a winner," Wrigley said. "I have always wanted a world's championship team and I'm not so sure that McCarthy is the man to give me that kind of a team. I was sadly disappointed after the world series of last year. I believe we should have won. I had a great fighting team. Baseball is like business, you know. You have to be a leader

Pirates Get but 9 Hits, Losing Twice to Reds

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The Reds, behind the excellent pitching of Jakie May in the first game and Ken Ash in the second, won both games of a double-header from Pittsburgh today, 8-0 and 5-2. The Pirates made only nine hits in the two frays. Nick Cullop, home-run king of the American Association before joining the Reds, hit one of the longest home runs ever made at Forbes Field in the third inning of the opener with Crawford on base. Cuccenillo hit for the circuit with Cullop on in the second game.

Stevinson Out of Play; Fails by 17 Strokes

Special to The Washington Post.

Merion Cricket Club, South Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 23.—Miller B. Stevinson, Washington entry from the Columbia Country Club, trailed Bobby Jones by exactly 30 strokes today and was eliminated in the qualifying round of the national amateur tournament at Merion.

Stevinson again could not control his shots and required an 85, only two strokes less than he scored yesterday, for a total of 172. Jones' tally was 142. Stevinson's score was 17 strokes above the qualifying limit. Stevinson had only three pars on his first nine holes today, going one stroke over on each of the other six to finish with 42. He parred the long fourth, the seventh and eighth. On the way home, he was nine over par. He had pars on the tenth, twelfth, thirteenth, but went over on the other.

His card:

Roland Mackenzie, another Walker Cup player; Kefe Carter, of Oklahoma City, former Western king, and Francis H. I. Brown, of Honolulu, the present California State champion, all failed by varying margins to make the qualifying grade.

Moe, adding an atrocious 83 to his previously good 74, for a total of 157, missed out by only two strokes, as did Guilford, but the downfall of most of the others was complete and effective. Tolley, with 82—81—163, was eight strokes from the low qualifying figure, while Dolp had 164, Egan 161, Brown 165, Herron 166 and Marston 159.

The dramatic climax of the day came when the eleven players at 155, telling off in two groups of six and five, began their struggle into the gathering dusk for the eight places left for any of them to fill. It took so long to finish the first hole that six still tied for five places, after it had been finished, were unable to start the second hole.

Three in the play-off clinched their qualifying places by brilliant work. Phillips Finlay, the long-hitting New Yorker, sank a 20-foot putt for a birdie three. Charles Seaver, Los Angeles youngster, and Ross Somerville, the Canadian champion, got par fours that also were good enough to put them in the fold. Chick Evans, veteran of many a championship battle and twice national champion, was eliminated when he drove into a trap, barely got out with his second, reached the green in three and took three putts. A similar six by Leonard Martin, of New York, put him out.

McCarthy Starts Match-Play.

In the remaining half dozen who must battle early tomorrow are Sweetser, Maurice McCarthy, jr., of New York; Watts Gunn, of Pittsburgh, who won his chance by a sensational finish today, Jack Ahearn, of Hamburg, N. Y.; Dave Ward, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Eddie Driggs, jr., of New York.

It was the first time in the tournament's history that so low a 36-hole total as 155 was needed to have a qualifying chance. For this reason Johnston and a flock of others on the border line, felt fairly safe until the boys began blasting things loose late in the day.

Unprecedented also was the total of eleven figuring in the play-off as well as the necessity of carrying it over for decision to another day.

The gallery of upward of 7,500 spectators came out mostly to see Jones and ran riot over the course as the triple champion again set the pace but failed in a bid to create a new all-time qualifying record. Going to the seventeenth, the Georgian needed a par on the last two holes to score a 71 and beat the old mark by two strokes with a total of 140. A wait of nearly 20 minutes on this tee, while the crowd milled around and players slowly forced their way through, proved costly to Jones. He got into a trap on the seventeenth and lost a stroke to par as he holed out in four. He then three-putted the eighteenth, missing a 7-footer that would have given him the record all by himself.

Jones Ties Mark of Corkran.

As it was Jones tied the mark set here in 1924 by D. Clarke Corkran, of Philadelphia, and equaled by the Georgian himself in 1927 at Minneapolis. By way of contrast, Corkran today wound up his qualifying play

This is the tenth of a series of articles analyzing the strength of the possible world series rivals.

By AL MUNRO ELIAS (Famous Statistician).

THEY say that a baseball team is no stronger than its substitutes. The maxim may be more or less true over a season's play, but in a series covering seven games at the most, it can not carry a great deal of weight. No one of the contending teams, with the possible ex

20,000 Watch Hitt's Racer Triumph

Favorite, Gone Away, Does No Better Than Third.

Caruso, Second, Is Outgamed in Duel With Winner.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 23.—K. E. Hitt's Hot Toddy, ably ridden by E. Watters, upset the dope of 20,000 spectators here today by winning the Autumn Handicap, mile and 70 yards feature of the initial program of the Harford Agricultural and Breeders Association's fall season.

The hugh crowd wagered as if William Zeagler's Gone Away had the race at his mercy, but the colt could do no better than finish third to Hot Toddy and W. R. Coe's Caruso, who ran coupled with Caesarion.

Caruso Quickest to Leave Stalls.

There was little or no delay at the barrier as the field of seven left the Waite stall gates. Caruso, breaking from No. 1 lane, was quickest to find his racing legs. Caruso led around the first turn, but had only a half length advantage over Bobashela as the run down the back lane started.

In the meantime, Hot Toddy on the rail could not find racing room and Jockey Watters had to sit cold until the far turn, where he was fortunate to get clear as Caruso went off the rail carrying Bobashela with him.

Quick to take advantage of the opening, Watters rushed Hot Toddy up fast, but at the turn for home Caruso was still slightly in advance of the ultimate winner. However, in the dash to the wire, Hot Toddy proved the gamer to win going away.

Caruso, although seeming to tire badly the last sixteenth, easily held the place over Gone Away, who ran below his usual form.

The Genesco Stable's Storm, under perfect handling by Sunny Workman, won the sixth, 1 1-16 miles. Workman took Storm to the top after the break and after fighting off Surgeon going down the back lane, gave his mount a powerful hand ride through the home stretch to outlast Ormonbird for the purse. Fair Beth was third.

Tambour, of Bean Stable, Cops Opener.

Preston M. Burch, of Washington, who bobs up every now and then with a good thing, scored the initial victory of the meeting when Tambour, 2-year-old bay, daughter of General Thatcher—Castanet ran five and one-half furlongs in 1:06 4-5 to lead home 14 others of her age.

There was considerable delay at the gate, but the field of 15 left the gates in alignment. After the field had settled into its stride it was found that Sonny Workman had P. M. Walker's One Alone on top, with the Middleburg Stable's Phantasime, and Tambour running as named.

At the turn Phantasime took command only to have Tambour run up to even terms with her half way through the home lane. In the dash to the wire, Tambour out gamed Phantasime, while Workman came again with One Alone to outlast Center Stone, the favorite, for third money.

The green, white polka dot, white sleeves, green cap of W. R. Coe flashed to victory in the September Handicap, a 6-furlong sprint, when Black Majesty scored over C. H. Pierce's The Heathen, the favorite, with the Tranquility Stable's Lady Capulet third. Ambrose shot Black Majesty out of the stall gates in advance of his five opponents and then took a tight rein on him. Although First Lady and The Heathen raced to even terms with him half way down the back stretch, Ambrose did not become flustered and kept his position on the rail.

Black Majesty Opens Up Two-Length Lead.

As the field swung for home, Black Majesty opened a two-length lead on The Heathen to go on to a handy score. The Heathen was put under the lash right down to the wire to save the place from Lady Capulet, one that closed fast from a slow beginning.

The stewards suspended Jockey A. Ambrose for four days for herding his field while leaving the barrier in the third race.

Ned O., 3-year-old chestnut gelding son of Campfire—La Flambee, racing in the interests of G. W. Foreman, of Baltimore, and held at favoritism in the wagering, justified that confidence by winning the Baltimorean, a mile and 70 yards affair, in the excellent time of 1:43 2-5.

Ned O showed plenty of early foot today, but it only caused him to be pocketed on the back stretch. However, his rider had sense enough to sit still to the far turn, where he slipped through, and, once in the clear, moved up fast to overhaul the Glen Riddle Farm's Full Dress in the home stretch.

After a short brush with the early pacemaker, Ned O went on to a handy victory. Full Dress hung on long enough to save the place from E. R. Bradley's Buckeye Poet.

Closing Event Won by Cogwheel.

G. M. Kelly's Cogwheel, coupled in the wagering with Keith, won the mile and one-eighth of the closing event. Jockey Adams rated Cogwheel back of the pace until straightened out in the home stretch, where he closed gamely to outlast Jay Reynolds, Fair Albert and K. N. Gilpin's Cherokee Maid. The latter made all the pace, but tired badly in the stretch.

TAMBOUR followed in near attendance of the early leaders, responded willingly to determined pressure, wore PHANTASIME down steadily and was slowly moving clear at the end. PHANTASIME had good early speed, saved ground all the way and held on stoutly when challenged nearing the finish. ONE ALONE, prominent throughout, continued gamely to outstay CENTER STONE. Latter, hard hurried throughout, was unable to menace the winner. UNUSUAL weakened in the final issue.

TARPAULIN, a quick beginner, displayed keen early speed, saved ground throughout, responded to hard urging in the last sixteenth and drew clear steadily under stout pressure. B'AR HUNTER, urged hard from the start, came with good energy for the final drive. DARK HERO, on the outside from the start, closed stoutly in the closing jaunt. HIBALA lacked early speed. He was making up ground at the end.

COGWHEEL, well up with the leaders from the break, raced on the outside of leaders until straightened out in the home stretch, where he forged to the front and was going away last sixteenth. FAIR ALBERT responded with good courage to Curran's desperate drive. He wore down the tiring CHEROKEE MAID to outgame the latter at end. CHEROKEE MAID broke well and showed plenty of foot in early stages, but hung when called on. VOWED VENGEANCE weakened at end.

Boots and Saddle's

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

—Havre de Grace Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 23. The Good and Gay Purse, 5½-furlong dash for 2-year-olds fillies, will be the best attraction of the second day's racing here. With the exception of the first and fifth races, large fields of cheap horses of various ages will met.

The Middleburg Stable's AMERISKA, which finished fourth in the Spinaway Stakes at Saratoga Springs, after leaving the gate in a tangle, may earn the big portion of the Good and Gay Purse. This miss has been close up with good youngsters on several occasions this year. VOLTAGREEN may be the one to beat. The daughter of Volta moved up from the plater ranks in Chicago the past summer until she finally beat some of the West's best 2-year-old fillies. SYDKA has been training well over Harford County course since she arrived from New York.

FIRST RACE—There is little to choose from among the maidens which will travel a mile and 70 yards in the day's opener. NILE MAIDEN is a well bred miss, being by Friar Rock out of Cleopatra. The fact she is trained by Benny Creech and will carry the W. R. Coe silks doesn't lessen her chances at all. Two have been named to carry the Audley Farm silks. They are CON AMORE and HONEY GROVE, both reported as having trained well. AZIZ has had many an opportunity. She is still a maiden. Just a chance she may break into the picture.

SECOND RACE—FERVID shapes up as the most probable winner of the day. She's no standout, however. The card is a very difficult one, so consider yourself lucky if you locate one winner. ALL HAIL was held in high rgeard last spring. She couldn't make the grade so the only thing left for her is claiming races. She should be close up in a contest like the second. The rail birds are talking quite a bit about DARK EDWINA. They locate a winner now and then.

FOURTH RACE—BETTY BEAU will break from the outside of the large field that will sprint 6 furlongs in the fourth number. That will be an advantage. She was very good in New York before coming to Maryland. KEEP ON is a quick beginner. BETTY BEAU will likely have the Coe filly to catch. JIMMY MORAN has been at this course for several weeks and they say he's been stepping high and handsome in the mornings. He'll either be close up or away back.

FIFTH RACE — REJUVENATION was at his best in Canada several weeks ago. They say he shipped well. That is all the information we need. When right he can lick the kind he meets in the fifth event, provided he runs his race. FAIR MAN is credited with a few good trials.

SIXTH RACE—Here we have the bad ones and plenty of them. Our clocker reports that JOE ENGEL breezed a mile in 1:42 3-5 over this course only a few days ago. He has only to run to that work to beat this field. CABELLSDALE performed over Maryland half-mile tracks. He looked good, but it appeared he just would not untrack himself over the abbreviated courses. TAZEWELL won a race at Marlborough. He scored rather easily. He has always run well over this track.

SEVENTH RACE—DANGER SIGNAL is fresh and good now. She can beat cheap ones like she will meet in the nightcap, but being last on the eligible list she isn't likely to start. CORBEAU was a winner in Canada the past summer. He was in over his head last out, but plenty of money was bet on him, nevertheless. Old HEDGEFENCE runs best when fresh. He may be up in time to earn the short award.

SHARKEY 2-1 CHOICE TO BEAT CAMPOLO TOMORROW

Boston Sailor Said to Be Sluggish

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Victorio Campolo, the big disappointment from the Argentine, tossed aside his padded mittens today, completely trained for his 15-round match with Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, in the final outdoor show of the season at the Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Working out at Orangeburg, N. Y., Campolo heaved his 220 pounds and 6 feet 6½ inches of height through his final workout while Sharkey went through his chores in a local gymnasium. The Boston sailor had failed to please the critics in his drills and seems short of work and condition. Campolo has trained hard for the match and, apparently is in perfect shape.

While the odds favor the experienced Sharkey, who plans to knock out the Argentine in two or three rounds, at about 2 to 1, Campolo has many suupporters. The gawky gaucho is an awkward workman, with a synthetic left hand that he usually forgets to use after the first round, but his right hand punching is formidable.

He belted old Tom Heeney in the side with his right until Tom collapsed one night at Ebbets Field, but he has been unable to land his ponderous clouts successfully on such gladiators as Phil Scott and Johnny Risko. His chief hope seems to be in catching Sharkey with his crusher in a careless moment.

Attempts to stir the interest of the paying customers have met with little success and the Madison Square Garden promoters are facing a severe financial loss on the engagement. Sharkey, dickering with Chicago promoters for a match with Primo Carnera, was roped back into the Garden fold by a guarantee of $100,000 for the Campolo match. Financial forecasts today indicate that the total gate may not exceed that sum. Campolo signed for $7,500 and the opportunity the bout offered.

Sharkey Refuses Bout's Postponement.

Sharkey grumbled charges today that the Garden was attempting to postpone the match until the interest of the populace could be further aroused. He said he had been offered a postponement but had insisted that the bout go on. Garden officials said they had offered Sharkey further time for training because inquiries concerning the gob's health revealed today he had been indisposed several days ago.

Sharkey was pronounced physically fit after an examination late today by physicians for the State Athletic Commission.

Another late development was the announcement that the fight would be broadcast by station WEAF.

Maryland Gridmen Set for Wash. College

Evidence of fitness for its opener with Washington College on Saturday was given yesterday by the Maryland University football squad during the course of a long scrimmage which lasted until 6:40 o'clock under the flood lights in Byrd Stadium.

The first and second teams alternated with the ball and each exhibited power on the offense, strengthening reports that Coach Curly Byrd's 1930 edition will possess a truly formidable attack.

That Maryland is prepared for what Washington may offer does not indicate, however, that it is yet ready for the Yale game, its first objective, scheduled October 4. The Byrdmen will do plenty of work before they depart for New Haven one week from tomorrow.

Washington College, incidentally, is not expected to be as easy to beat as it proved last year when the Old Liners romped in with a 34-7 victory.

Cubs Accept Chisoxs' Challenge for Series

Chicago, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The Cubs today accepted the challenge of the White Sox for a city championship series unless they do the highly improbable and win the national league title.

The series will start on or about October 1, and run until one team has won four games.

"Sure we'll play the White Sox," owner William Wrigley said. "We'd play them even if President William Veecfi had to pitch. Our pitching staff is in poor shape because of injuries but we'll be there." The Cubs won the last city series played in 1928.

NATS BEATEN BY MINORS, 9 TO 8

Eastern League Stars Break Tie in 8th to Triumph.

Special to The Washington Post.

HARTFORD, CONN., Sept. 23.—The Eastern League All-Stars, a team composed mostly of players who campaigned in the minor loop during the past summer, edged out the Washington American Baseball Club, 9 to 8, at Bulkley Stadium here today, Dougherty scoring the winning tally on a hot single by "Mandy" Brooks in the eighth and final inning. The game was called to allow the Nats to catch a train.

The minor leaguers hit Child, who started for the Nats, freely, scoring a run in each of the first and second innings, and tallying six in the fourth, when "Whitey" Dressen, who led the Eastern League in hitting during the past season, hit a homer over the left field fence with the bases loaded.

The Nats scored a run in each of the second, third and fourth innings and Burke was sent to the mound to repalce Child and check the hard-hitting Eastern Leaguers. Hits by Harris, Treadaway and Hargraves, who replaced Ruel, started the Nats on a scoring rally in the sixth, which brought them two runs, and they got three more to lock the count at 8 to 8 in the seventh on passes to Harris and Treadaway and a smashing homer by Hargrave.

They failed to score in their half of the eighth and Dougherty singled for the minor leaguers. He was sacrificed to second by Billy Gleason and tallied with the winning run when Brooks hammered out a sizzling single just inside third base.

Light Eagle Eleven to Face Shenandoah

A team averaging slightly less than 162 pounds will take the field for American University in the opening of its football season with Shenandoah College Saturday in Central Stadium, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

The line-up and weights follow: Ed Parke, end, 166; Russell Lambert, tackle, 203; Willett Denit, guard, 162; Ted Lytle, center, 150; Fred Johnson, guard, 160; Carl Levine, tackle, 175; William Fuchsle, end, 153; George Borsari, quarter back, 142; George Olsen, half back, 146; Richard Jarvis, half back, 156, and Forrest Diehl, full back, 165.

With Milton Polston, 275-pound guard, in the line-up, American's eleven would average about 172 pounds.

Little is known here of the strength of Shenandoah except that virtually the same team that represented the Virginia school last fall is again in harness, directed by a new coach.

RAMM-MOORE SIGNED.

Havre de Grace Notes

Special to The Washington Post.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 23.—Sonny Workman, probably America's best rider, came down from New York to accept several mounts. He left after the day's sport for New York, where he will ride Prometheus tomorrow.

Boot to Boot, one that raced well for E. R. Bradley in 1926, was returned to training today. He went a handy mile in 1:46.

Jim Butler's Questionnaire, who lost by a nose to Gallant Fox recently, won't be a starter in the $20,000 Potomac Handicap on Thursday. Reports have it that Owner Butler has informed Trainer Andy Schuttinger not to race any horses at this meeting.

Charlie Waite, whose stall starting gates are used here, left today for Kentucky, where he will set up a similar model of his gate for the Latonia and Churchill Downs sessions. Waite will return East in time for the 23-day meeting at Laurel, which will also use his gate. The approaching Laurel session is the first time stall gates have ever been used.

The Nevada Stock Farm's Siskin, a candidate for the $20,000 Eastern Shore on Saturday, turned three-quarters, the distance of the race, in 1:15 2-5 this morning.

TENNESSEE'S GRID HOPES LOWERED

McEvers' Loss, Due to Diamond Injury, Most Costly.

By DILLON GRAHAM.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—The same jinx that has camped on the trail of the Tennessee Volunteers for the past three years already has made its appearance this season, just when things were beginning to look brighter for the Knoxville squad.

Not since 1926 have the volunteers been beaten, yet they have never advanced further than the anteroom to the Southern gridiron throne. On November 13, 1926, Vanderbilt whipped Tennessee, 20 to 3. Since that time the Vols haven't dropped a game and now possess the longest unbeaten run of any major team in the Nation.

Injury Robs Tennessee Of McEver.

The following year the Commodores again blockaded the Vols' path with a 7-to-7 tie, and for the past two seasons Kentucky has proved the hob goblin. In 1928 the Wildcats and Volunteers played to a 0-to-0 tie, and last year, on a snow-covered field in Lexington, Ky., the Blue Grass team again spoiled Tennessees' championship hopes with a 7-to-7 deadlock.

With a veteran team back, boasting probably the best back field in the South, Coach Bob Neyland, together with a majority of other Southern mentors, had reason to believe 1930 would be Tennessee year. But a second injury Monday to a knee hurt in a baseball game during the summer has robbed the Vols of Gene McEver, their greatest scoring threat.

However, the coaches were not caught asleep. For some time they had feared that McEver might be lost to the team and have groomed a pair of half backs to alternate in his half-back position. Buddy Hackman, Gene's running mate, will be available and Ty Disney and Paul Heydrick are scheduled to take Gene's post.

If these boys can fit into the regular back field and give a good account of themselves, Tennessee may yet rule all it surveys throughout Dixie.

After Louisiana State's great offensive showing last week in the 76 to 0 victory over South Dakota Wesleyan, few will dispute Coach Russ Hen's statement that he possesses a back field which collectively could match any other in Dixie.

Reeves, Hendrix, Bowman, Butler, Keller and a sophomore with a tongue-twisting name—Almorkary—all ran wild to give the South its first victory in the intersectional conflict for the year.

Southern fans will watch the Tigers with much interest in their first game on October 11 against South Carolina.

Josh Cody took the blankets off a pair of fleet half backs last week in Clemson's opening game against Presbyterian and these youngsters, Harvin and Welch, scampered all over the premises to carry the Bengals to an easy victory.

With "Goat" McMillan and other luminaries gone, Cody probably will find these newcomers very valuable during this season.

One-Sided Matches Mark Women's Match Play.

WOMEN members of the Indian Spring Club yesterday competed in the first round of match play for the club championship. Mrs. Perry B. Hoover, the medalist of the qualification round, was only 1 up against her opponent, Mrs. George Diffenbaugh, at the end of the first nine, but thereafter lengthened her lead until she won by a score of 4 up and 3 to play.

All of the matches were more or less one-sided, as follows:

FIRST FLIGHT—Mrs. Perry B. Hoover defeated Mrs. George Diffenbaugh, 4 and 3; Mrs. Heap defeated Mrs. E. B. Wagner, 3 and 1; Mrs. C. J. Mattson defeated Mrs. B. von Steinner, 4 and 3; Mrs. J. F. Gross defeated Mrs. F. E. Lewis, 7 and 6.

SECOND FLIGHT—Mrs. P. J. Kennedy defeated Mrs. H. P. Brown, 7 and 6; Mrs. H. A. Mihills defeated Mrs. B. G. Simpich, 2 and 1; Miss Ruby Campbell defeated bye; Mrs. J. W. Harvey defeated Mrs. J. H. Pence, 10 and 8.

THIRD FLIGHT—Mrs. W. N. Jackson defeated Mrs. W. B. O'Connell, 6 and 5; Mrs. H. T. Whelan defeated bye; Mrs. E. J. Carrico defeated bye; Mrs. Howard Eales defeated bye.

In the qualification round for the men's championship there was a tie between George C. Gist and Charles R. Morrow, each with 75. This tie will be played off on Friday afternoon.

The third annual golf tournament of the National Press Building will be held at the Manor Country Club next Friday. It is open to all tenants of the National Press Building at Fourteenth and F streets northwest, their assistants and staff and all members of the National Press Club, which has its quarters on the thirteenth floor of the building.

Best Tourney Ever Is Predicted.

This year's tournament promises to excel both previous ones, both as to the number of prizes and their value. The low gross prize will be the National Press Building silver golf trophy on which is engraved each year the name of the best golfer in the National Press Building. There will be the usual prizes for other low gross scores for eighteen holes and also low gross score for the first and second nine holes.

There will be an equal number of prizes for the low net for eighteen holes and for the first and second nine holes. The greatest number of pars and birdies will not be overlooked in the point of prizes and a "booby" prize will be given for the highest gross score, and also a prize for the best dressed golfer or Beau Brummell of the links.

Applications for entry in this tournament will be accepted up to 3 o'clock, tomorrow afternoon, and may be filed with the National Press Building Corporation, room 235, National Press Building. Details as to handicaps, starting time, pairings, &c., may be obtained from W. M. Smith, chairman of the committee on arrangements and prizes, room 1052, National Press Building, or by telephone, National 1286.

Amateur-Pro Tourney On October 1.

An amateur-pro golf tournament will be staged on the course of the Congressional Country Club on Wednesday afternoon, October 1, under the auspices of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association. The amateurs will be divided on a handicap basis into three classes, 1 to 12, 13 to 23 and 24 to 36. The pros will be allowed to choose their own partners, not necessarily from the club with which they are affiliated.

G. P. O. FEDERALS DRILL.

G. P. O. Federals will practice tonight at 7 o'clock on the field at Seventeenth and B streets northwest, in preparation for their game Sunday with the Del Rays on George Mason Field at 3 o'clock.

Wells, Vogt Rejoin G. W. Squad Following Injuries

Hoffman Practices Drop-Kicking; "Duke" White, Out for First Time, Impresses; Galloway, Demas Sure of Berths.

JOINING the squad in its first workout on its home field at the Tidal Basin yesterday, recently injured George Washington University football players reported for workouts after more than a week of enforced idleness. Billy Wells, probably first-string quarter back, and Bill Vogt, crack end, were the two to take up the grind with the rest of their mates.

With the process of registration completed, Head Coach Jim Pixlee personally directed the session, which lasted for more than three hours. He had his kickers working and his passers throwing, and concluded the afternoon with a scrimmage between two lines.

Hoffman Practices Drop-Kicks.

"Blackie" Hoffman, varsity full back last year, spent an unusually heavy afternoon, practicing for more than an hour the art of drop-kicking from the 15-yard line. Hoffman was none too accurate at the start of the afternoon, but improved as the day wore on.

"Duke" White, on the squad last year, joined the squad and spent the afternoon in getting the kinks out of his legs. For the first time out White's boots were impressive, three out of every four sailing for a distance of some 50 yards.

While no definite line-up of the team, which will oppose Rutgers in the opening game, October 4, has been announced, certain of the candidates seem to have a stranglehold on their positions and undoubtedly will be in the game at the opening whistle.

Galloway, Demas Appear Sure of Jobs.

Bob Galloway appears to have just about clinched one of the end positions and Zachary Demas looks good at guard.

In the back field Joe Carter will have much to say before being ousted from a half-back berth while Billy Wells is ready to call signals. The ultimate positions of "Bugs" Bagranoff, "Obe" O'Brien and Lyle Sturtevant, all erstwhile line men now playing in the back field, are yet to be settled. All are valuable men and, with several former backs of last year getting into form, may revert to their old posts.

Alexandria Sports

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 23.—Manager Pat Gorman, of the Virginia Athletic Club, stated today flood lights would be installed at the Shipyard Field, where the Virginians play football, so the candidates for the team can engage in drills three nights a week.

Thirty-three players are striving for berths on the Orange and Blue Eleven and Coach Beach is anxious to get going with active training so he can pick his best men.

Episcopal High School gridders will oppose Western High, of Washington, in the opening grid game on their schedule Saturday, September 28. Coach "Bick" Cardwell reports his squad is in good condition for this encounter.

The Episcopal "B" team will meet the Alexandria High Varsity Team on Friday afternoon in Auexandria.

Bob Vogt was elected as manager of the St. Mary's Lyceum Five at a meeting held in Lyceum Hall last night. Jake Preston was named coach of the team and Edward Harlow advisor.

The Lyceum boys will stage a card party on October 15 to raise funds to purchase basketball equipment.

The Alpha Delta Omega Fraternity gridders will open their football season Sunday, opposing the crack Fort Myer Post Team on Hunton Field. Coach Mike Goldman announces that Russ Sutton, former Emerson Institute Team, has signed to play in the back field. The Fraters will hold an important drill Thursday night.

Director Charles Corbett, of the St. Mary's Celtics Baseball Team, hopes to arrange a double-header for next Sunday. The Celtics will probably play St. Joseph's in the opener and the Laurel Athletic Club in the nightcap.

The Celtic gridders held an important football workout last night. They hope to open their season on October 5.

DIXIE PIGS CHALLENGE.

The Dixie Pigs, Prince Georges County champions, want to book a game for Sunday with the Northern, St. Mary's Celtics or any strong team. The Pigs, who are competing in the Capital City League play-off, having draw a bye in the championship play this Sunday.

CELTICS NEAR END.

St. Mary's Celtics wind up their baseball season Sunday with a double-header. St. Joseph's A. C. and the Laurel Md., Nine will probably furnish the opposition.

G. U. PLAYER NOT BADLY INJURED

Halfback Alenty Due to Rejoin Squad Next Week.

GOOD news was received by Georgetown players and coaches yesterday when it was learned that Joe Alenty, promising sophomore half back, had suffered no serious injury when he fell heavily on his back last Saturday in practice and that by the end of next week he should be fully recovered.

X-ray pictures taken of Alenty's back at Georgetown Hospital showed the ligaments had been strained. A more serious injury had been feared and Alenty's services were believed lost for the season. He is one of the best interferers and pass receivers in the Hilltop squad.

Srimmage Session Today.

The Hilltoppers took a three-hour workout yesterday in Griffith Stadium, where on Saturday they will open their season in a game with Mount St. Mary's, an old rival. Passing and signal practice was stressed. Today a scrimmage will be held with the husky freshmen squad.

Today's scrimmage probably will be the last of the rough work the Hoyas are to undergo in preparation for their debut. There are so many players ailing that the coaches seek to avoid further depletion of the ranks of the "fit and ready" by cutting short practice of gruelling nature.

Head Coach Mills still remains silent as to the nomination of the first-string team. He doesn't yet feel certain of who will start the opening game. He says that the opener will develop the information he wants in finally picking the first string.

Four New Candidates Report.

Four additional candidates reported at yesterday's drill. They are Paul Dillon, center on the basket ball team, who hopes to win an end assignment; Vincent Wilder, also an end aspirant, and William Thompson and William Gerety, half backs. Thompson is a brother of Jerry Thompson, fleet half back of the 1926 Georgetown Eleven.

Carnera-Godfrey Sign For Bout on October 9

Chicago, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Primo Carnera may meet George Godfrey, Negro heavyweight, in a return match in the Cub's baseball park October 9, provided Promoter Mique Malloy can obtain sanction of the Illinois State Athletic Commission. Malloy will appear before the commission today. He has both boxers signed.

WILSON TO BE HONORED.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 23 (Special).—Plans were in the making here today for a reception for Hack Wilson, National League home-run king, upon his return to his home at the end of the baseball season. Mayor Chris H. Dailey and other city officials, as well as heads of various civic and fraternal organizations are cooperating to give the baseball star a splendid welcome as a testimonial for his most successful season.

WEST VIRGINIA SEES CLOSE SENATE RACE

PROPHETS STAY SILENT

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 23.—The approaching election in West Virginia, as far as it pertains to the race for the United States Senate, appears to be more uncertain than any in many years, according to veteran political observers. Try as they may, unbiased followers of politics in the Mountain State find it most difficult to predict the victor in the fight for the toga of Senator Guy Despard Goff, who is retiring after six years of service.

The contestants for Senator Goff's seat are Col. James Elwood Jones, multimillionaire coal operator, who hails from the southern end of the State, and Maj. M. M. Neely, former senator and lawyer, who comes from Fairmont, in the northern part. Jones is the Republican nominee, Neely the Democratic.

Maj. Neely's Strength.

West Virginia is normally Republican by about 65,000 majority, but even the most confident Republicans know better than to talk in those figures when Maj. Neely is the Democratic standard bearer. The reasons for this are: Neely is the only Democrat ever elected to the Senate from West Virginia by popular vote; he defeated Senator Howard Sutherland, one of the best vote getters in the history of this State, by 11,000 majority in 1922; he lost to Senator Henry Drury Hatfield in 1928 by less than 10,000 votes, while Al Smith dropped out of the picture by about 110,000, and the remainder of the ticket fell behind the Republicans by majorities ranging from 50,000 to 83,000.

Col. Jones is making his debut in State-wide politics. He has held a post as county commissioner in his home county for twenty years. His neighbors point to him as a philanthropist and praise his liberality in educating a number of poor boys in his and neighboring counties. He is immensely wealthy, his wealth being estimated at as much as $60,000,000.

Friends of Col. Jones point out something that seems to be strongly in his favor. That is that his opponent in the coming election, when a candidate in 1922 and 1928, received the votes and support of nearly all of the coal operators in the State. These friends continue their argument by saying that it seems decidedly unreasonable to figure that this element will support the major this time because the colonel is one of their number. Both sides know the value of the backing the coal barons can furnish and both sides want it, of course. Neely's friends assert that his supporters in the coal fields will not desert him because of the aid he gave them while in the Senate; also they believe, with his legal knowledge and his parliamentary experience he will be able to do more for them than his Republican opponent could.

Neely Keen Campaigner.

From Neely's friends comes the boast that when it comes to campaigning there is no question as to the merits of the two candidates. The northern end's candidate is known for his oratory, while Jones has never made a great reputation along that line.

A point in Neely's favor seems to be the statements of several leading Republicans of the State that Jones has at times supported Democrats. However, reports have it now that Jones will hardly lose as many votes on that account as the Republican party seems to be united.

When every angle is considered the forthcoming battle looks as if it will be a hard-fought one. The Republicans are anxious to hold on to Senator Goff's seat and the Democrats are extremely anxious to have their party represented in the upper house.

Both candidates are expected to start campaigning shortly. Jones, whether he makes many speeches or not, will visit every county in the State and extol the Republican party; Neely will go over the same territory and blame the present business conditions on President Hoover and his followers.

MISS MYSTERIOUS

By LARRY LAWRENCE

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Thelma Townley, coed, called Babe by her friends, gets a letter from her guardian, Clement Forseith, saying that he has lost all her money and is going to commit suicide. It also says that she has been fooled about her identity all her life, and predicts that she will never learn who she really is. Morgan, handsome young man, proposes, saying he knows her trouble. She is warned against him, and that same night Peter Jones, Milwaukee senior, asks her to marry him. She turns him down, feeling she has no right to marry until she learns who she is. Babe is kidnaped, and Peter rescues her. Babe resolves to get work and do anything to learn the truth of her parentage. She is haunted by fear of an inherited taint. After days of seeking a job, she is accosted by a man who says his name is Mac. He tells her more, but offers her mysterious work. She accepts, goes with him to a gambling dive and sees Morgan, who takes her to an apartment. He tries to make violent love, and she shoots him, but he is not seriously wounded. Mac arrives, searches the room, and finds two old brooches that had been stolen from her. Morgan tells her before the shooting that Forseith did not commit suicide, and she realizes that he is back of the attempt to kidnap her. Mac says he is hunting a murderer, and when they compare histories they realize that he is seeking Forseith. To get a line on him Babe feigns amnesia, and gets police to arrest her. Her pictures are in the papers, and Pete and Violet Rimmel, friends of Babe, come to her rescue. Mac is captured by the kidnapers and taken to the hide-out of a Chicago gangster. Babe is torn between love for Pete and Mac. She quarrels with Pete, and races to the gangster's lodge in an effort to save Mac. When she gets there she sees him being tortured, breaks a window and gets into the place. A guard covers her with an automatic.

CHAPTER XXV.

Six explosions in rapid succession split the air. The guard leaped to his place of safety from which he could survey the approach to the lodge. But he saw nothing. Two more explosions like pistol shots rang out. He waited, expecting to see several men rush the lodge. For minutes he stood there, taut, ready for anything. Then another explosion was heard and in a second a battered old car chugged from behind the shielding bushes and headed down the trail. The guard jumped from behind his protecting wall and raced to the porch shooting at the disappearing car which was by now gathering speed and careening over the road. In a second it was out of sight having taken a bend in the road on two wheels.

The guard clumped back into the lodge, scowling.

"Where's your game?" Forseith quizzed, trying to appear no more concerned than if the guard had been out to shoot rabbits.

"Gone," the guard exploded. "Gone." Babe was shuddering with apprehension now. She had recognized the explosions as the backfiring of the boy's ancient automobile. She asked no questions, fearing to draw the anger of the sullen Lugo. Forseith, however, was not as unconcerned as he seemed.

"Who was it?" he demanded at last.

"Don't know," Lugo growled, then added, "Just some blundering fool of a hayshaker I suppose. All I got to look at was the rear end of an old ash can."

"Well, if that's all, you might remove our friend. Get him into bed." Forseith indicated the heavy form of Scareye who was now snoring and making deep throat noises.

Lugo seemed satisfied now that Forseith could guard the pair of prisoners, the one still tied, the other a girl, and so he went to the kitchen to find Sambo. In a few minutes he returned with a Negro who was almost white with fright.

"Help me carry the Boss in," Lugo ordered and Sambo, rolling his eyes, looking from one to the other of the persons in the room, at last decided to assist. They carried the Boss into his bedroom. Babe was glad that she no longer had to look at that flaming scar over his eye. Mac showed no emotion, but he was on the alert, as ready for anything as a man with his arms behind him could be.

Forseith took Babe's pistol from his pocket and toyed with it. "Is it loaded?" he asked, and broke it to see for himself. "Well, well. So it is. Huh! One cartridge gone, and the barrel is not clean. Very careless! Very careless! Did you kill him?"

"What are you talking about?" Babe demanded.

Forseith snapped the cylinder back in place, twirled the pretty weapon several times, admiring it before he answered. "If only one shot were needed to do the trick it speaks well for your marksmanship, my dear Miss Townley. It must be a pleasure to be killed by one so charming. But perhaps, after all, it was only a rabbit. You look like you have been racing about through the woods. Really, your coat; yes, even your frock, is all tattered and torn."

Forseith lighted a cigarette, flipped the match at the fireplace and inhaled several times, waiting for an answer. Babe decided to let him do the talking.

Lugo came back into the room, followed by the cook, who went on through and into his part of the house. Lugo stopped, picked up the whisky bottle and went to the rear of the house. Now that the Boss was out and likely to stay out for several hours, he decided it was a good chance to get a few drinks. When the Boss was awake he wouldn't permit Lugo to have a drop or to leave his observation post without a relief man being on the job. Lugo was fed up on standing at that post and, after all, it hadn't done much good to be there. He would desert while the Boss was safely out of the way and let the Duke do as he pleased with the prisoners. They meant nothing to him.

Forseith continued to smile as if he were quite pleased with himself and the world in general. He certainly was enjoying himself now. He quoted:

"'Will you walk into my parlor?' said the spider to the fly. 'Well, not hardly,' said the insect as he winked the other eye." Then he grinned again. His manner was becoming unbearable. Babe felt she must scream, but she clenched her fists and held onto herself, steadying her nerves. She would not let this smiling spider unnerve her.

"Do you know, Miss Townley, I had not hoped for such luck as this. You certainly started out to be a hard fly to net, and then, presto, you come sailing in of your own accord.

"I wonder what brought you here. Oh! By the way, have you met this gentleman? I am sorry I can't supply the name. Maybe he will be so kind as to tell us both just who he is. How about it, friend?"

"My name is Mac," the prisoner answered simply.

"Yes, yes, Mac. How enlightening Miss Townley, meet Mr. Mac. I don't know Mac what as yet. There are so many Macs in this world. MacIver, MacGregor, MacIntosh (to stick to the Scotch) and McDonough. Oh, well, we'll not undertake to mention all the Irish. By the way, Mac, which are you, Scotch or Irish?"

"Scotch-Irish," Mac answered and closed his mouth with a click.

"And you, Miss Townley? What is your nationality?"

Babe's first impulse was to shout, "You probably know. I don't." But she thought better of it. If Forseith was ignorant of the fact that she now knew who he was she had no intention of telling him. A closed mouth, she decided, would be better for a while at least. But she could not see what he meant by all this playing around with words and questions. Maybe it was just to torture his victims with a refined method. Well, it was less painful than the torture Scareye had attempted. She hoped that drunken chieftain of the underworld would stay sodden and comatose as long as she was held here.

Mac was playing a silent game, too. He had pretended not to recognize her from the first. She would be just as silent. That might serve to make this spider talk more. She had not thought of Forseith as a spider before. Now she began to see him as a crawly, voracious, venomous spider, his long legs in striped trousers, his long arms in a black velvet house coat. Yes, he did look like a spider. Now he was simply teasing his victims, letting them swing in the breeze in his tight web until he got ready to suck their blood.

Babe almost wished that he would start the blood-sucking and give some indication of his purpose. She looked at Mac. His face was twisted a little as if he were in pain. No doubt he was, with his arms strapped behind him. She wondered how long he had been forced to endure that punishment. It made her own mental torture the worse to know that he was suffering physical torture as well as mental in stoical silence. The man she loved suffering, and all because she had been headstrong, selfish and had insisted on following Forseith. Forseith was still talking. She must pay attention, keep her mind on what he was saying, even if it did sound unimportant. She must fight to be keen, ready to snatch any chance that offered itself.

"That was rather a good picture of you in the papers," Forseith was saying now. "Townley. Townley. Where have I heard that name before?" Babe almost blurted out a sharp answer again. Was he trying to find out how much she knew? She decided that he probably was. But why? He had her now. Why should he be careful what he said? Why should he talk in circles?

Mac swayed a little in his chair. Babe saw it. She wanted to step to him, remove his shackles, kiss him. But this impulse she also managed to resist. She could not, however, remain silent any longer.

"Mr. Spider," she said, "you are killing your other fly."

"What are you saying, my dear?"

"Look. Your prisoner is dying from pain."

"Why, I do believe he is in pain," Forseith agreed. "I'll have to remedy that. I am not cruel, Miss Townley. You'll learn that in time."

"I will think you are very kind right now if you'll take those straps off your victim." There was a pleading note in Babe's voice.

"I am always anxious to do a favor for a beautiful girl," Forseith answered, and then called for Sambo. When that person, now returned to his natural shade, appeared, Forseith ordered that he bring several stout straps at once. As soon as he had them he ordered Sambo to strap Mac's ankles together. That done, he told him to release the arms.

"Thank you," Mac said as he began working his arms up and down, extending his fingers and flexing his wrists to start the circulation.

The sun was setting Babe could see a golden glow in the West. "I hope the boy got home in time for supper," she mused, and, for the hundredth time it seemed, marveled that such irrelevant ideas should take possession of her mind while she was facing such a crisis.

Forseith called Sambo again. "We are having a guest for dinner, Sambo," he said, and smiled at Babe. "It will be a pleasure, I am sure, to have you dine with me. I do wish you had a more presentable dinner gown, but I suppose it can't be helped."

Babe looked at her forlorn dress, then she, too, smiled. "I'll be glad to dress for dinner if you'll call a cab and let me go get my wardrobe," she offered.

"I am sorry I can't do that," Forseith replied. "But we'll make the best of it. And I'm sure you will enjoy dinner. Sambo is a good man. I understand that he is a product of Pullman training."

"Sambo," Forseith called. "Find Lugo and send him in here before you set the table." Sambo was back with Lugo in a few minutes. Lugo was terribly drunk. "How unfortunate," Forseith remarked. "It begins to look as if prohibition should be enforced more strictly. Lugo, give me your automatic. It's dangerous in the hands of a gentleman so thoroughly saturated as you happen to be."

"You think I'm drunk! You're crazy," Lugo blurted, then weaved a little. "Perfectly sober, perfectly. I need this pet of mine (patting the weapon). Gotta protect the boss. Gotta guard the shack."

"Give me the gun. No more talk out of you," Forseith rapped out. Lugo pulled away and reeled backward, clapping his right hand on the holster to draw his weapon. Forseith, seeing the motion, stepped in and gave him a short jab to the jaw. Mac leaped to his feet.

"Now if ever," thought Babe.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

SUITABLE FABRICS FOR CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

Children may wear cotton fabrics the year round provided the underwear is adjusted to the season. Heavy cottons, such as jean, madras and pique, may be used for winter wear. All fabrics must be fast to sun and laundering. Colors do not show soil so quickly as white, but no suit should be worn until so badly soiled that drastic laundering is necessary. This always injures the fabric. Materials that are evenly woven, firm, durable, nonshrinkable, and not easily wrinkled are best. Suits made of fabrics with body can be laundered without starching and there are no scratchy seams to irritate a child's tender skin. The most common and practical materials for trousers are poplin, broadcloth, pique, drill, galatea, chambray and different brands of fabric made especially for children's wear.

For blouses, printed or plain gingham, percale, cotton pongee, and broadcloth are good selections.

Washable wool materials may be used for small boys' suits, but they require special care when laundered. A washable tan flannel suit is easily pressed because of its simplicity of design and construction. Unnecessary thickness of material are avoided, and rows of brown machine stitching form the attractive trim. The trousers are of the one-piece pattern with bound side openings reinforced by arrowheads, and there are no side seams nor heavy lapping plackets, which are always difficult to press well in woolen or heavy fabrics.

Ringle Rejoins Team; Blues' Stock Booms

Gallaulet's football stock has taken an unexpected jump, the reason being the appearance of Johnny Ringle, 180-pound fullback and leading scorer of the 1929 Blues Eleven, on the Kendall Green campus. Ringle, according to earlier reports, would not return to school but he's on the scene now and ready to don a uniform for practice.

TARIFF GROUP SETS DATES OF HEARINGS

Commission Is to Take Up Eleven Articles in Next Two Months.

FIRST MEETING OCT. 28

(Associated Press.)

The Hoover Tariff Commission announced yesterday public hearings would be held within the next two months on eleven articles in the Hawley-Smoot act, including many which stirred up long controversies in the Senate.

The hearings, under the flexible provision, were ordered by the Senate. A majority of the articles affected received increased rates in the new tariff law and production cost inquiries were asked, in most instances, by Democratic senators with the claim that the finding would show reductions justified.

The hearing dates and the articles involved follow: October 28, straw hats; 30, pig iron; November 5, woven wire fencing and wire netting; 6, ultramarine blue; 7, smokers' articles; 11, pig skin leather; 12, maple sugar and maple sirup; 13, wood flour; 14, wool felt hats; 18, wool floor coverings not specially provided for, and November 19, wood furniture.

In Shape for Hearings.

In announcing the dates, Henry P. Fletcher, the new Republican chairman, told newspapers in his first interview that although determination of the hearings before a preliminary statement of information had been furnished to manufacturers and importers represened a change in old commission practices, this did not necessarily mean such a policy would be continued.

"We believed," he explained, "we were in such shape that we could go ahead with public hearings."

He added that the old commission had turned over to the new one many facts on the eleven articles, and if sufficient evidence were not adduced at the hearings to warrant a rate recommendation for the President, further investigations would be made and additional hearings held.

Under the law, whatever rates the commission finds necesary to equalize production costs here and abroad must either be accepted by the President or given a pocket veto. The flexible provisions of the Fordney-McCumber act, which the Smoot-Hawley law displaced, permitted the President to proclaim a different increase from that proposed by the commission, as long as it did not exceed 50 per cent.

Limitation Is Retained.

This limitation is retained in the present law, but applies to the commission alone.

Mr. Fletcher said the commission was studying proposed changes in procedure, but had not finally determined upon any thus far.

Pending appointment of the sixth member of the commission, he said no vital steps, such as rate recommendations or important personnel appointments would be taken.

Mr. Fletcher would not predict whether the flexible clause investigations would be speeded up under the new law, but said the commission hoped to accelerate the work "without sacrificing the merits of the case."

Potato Prices Sag During Past Week

Florida Grape Fruit Car-Lot Shipments Show Big Gain in Period.

Sweet and Irish potato prices sagged considerably during the past week, while lettuce and peaches were the only fresh produce reflecting gains, according to the report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Combined carlot shipments of some 32 fruits and vegetables decreased to approximately 24,330 cars for the week, or 6,300 less than the total moved during the corresponding period of last year. The output of Florida grapefruit increased substantially, but movements of potatoes, peaches, cantaloupes and watermelons were lighter.

The crop of apples in the Potomac-Shenandoah Valley district is variously estimated by shippers from 40 to 50 per cent as large as last year. Carlot shipments to date from this district have reached only 1,325 cars, compared with 4,765 for the same period a year ago. Apple shipments from Eastern and Western districts also declined, compared with totals for the same week in 1929.

SKINKER EAGLES PLAY.

The strong Skinker Eagles Nine plays one of its last games of the year next Sunday, when it opposes the Hyattsville (Md.) crack aggregation on the latter's diamond. The fracas gets under way at 3 o'clock.

FARM GROSS INCOME SHOWS GAIN IN YEAR

CROP REVENUES SLUMP

(Associated Press.)

An increase in the gross farm production income from $11,741,000,000 in 1928 to $11,851,000,000 for 1929 was reported yesterday by the Department of Agriculture.

The gross income from live stock and live-stock products for 1929 was estimated at $6,249,000,000, and that from crops at $5,603,000,000. As compared with 1928, the crop income declined $73,000,000 but the gross income from live stock and live-stock products increased $183,000,000.

Department economist said the decrease in the crop income last year was largely due to declines in income from grains and cotton, which more than offset an increase of nearly $200,000,000 in the gross income from vegetables. In the live stock and live-stock products group wool was the only commodity to show a decrease.

Operating costs of farming during 1929 were virtually the same as in 1928. After deducting operating costs, wages to hired labor, taxes, interest on debts, and rent paid to nonoperating owners, the balance available for capital, labor and management was $5,578,000,000, compared with $5,478,000,000 for 1928, an increase of $100,000,000.

The average farm family income available for capital, labor and management was $882 for 1929, compared with $864 for 1928. These figures, it was added, do not represent the total income per farm family, inasmuch as they do not include that derived from sources other than agriculture.

Tennessee Will Send McEver to Specialist

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Maj. Bob Neylan, head football coach of the University of Tennessee, announced this afternoon that Gene McEver, star half back, will visit a specialist at Youngstown, Ohio, for treatment of an injured knee which has threatened to keep him out of action this season.

When the knee was injured again during practice Monday, Coach Neyland said McEver probably was through football for this year. The decision to have him treated in Youngstown, Neylan said, was made in the hope that he can be saved to this year's team.

ACTIVE STOCKS GAIN DESPITE SOFT SPOTS

U. S. STEEL UP 2 POINTS

-New York, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Although today's financial news was largely dominated by the weakness of grains and other commodities, the stock market squeezed into prominence by virtue of late short covering which pushed active shares 2 to 4 points above the previous close.

Until the last half hour the market exhibited considerable irregularity. Although it seemed to favor a small advance, the break in wheat to new lows since 1906, as well as recessions in corn, rye and cotton and heaviness of two or three share groups made the rise hesitant and spotty. Toward the close, a rumor that the directors of American Can would declare an extra dividend of $1 a share circulated on the exchange floor and the shorts, who had been having trouble in bringing out further losses, began to buy back shares they had sold. Trading failed to become particularly active on the rally, however, and total sales fell just short of 2,000,000 shares.

Sentiment was improved around midday by the support accorded to shares whose dividends are well fortified, and a number of industrial and utility issues began to move forward. It was reported that in addition to some foreign buying prominent financial interests which had taken stocks around the lows of June and August were again picking up the leaders and this discouraged professional selling, although U. S. Steel and a few others had dipped below yesterday's minimums in a forenoon reaction.

Copper and Oils Drop.

Coppers were weak in expectation of further dividend reductions, especially in the Anaconda group whose boards meet soon. Declines to new lows in the coppers, as well as in the oils, were numerous, but there was some recovery. Scattering liquidation in rails eased prices a point or two before a firmer tone appeared on publication of the August earnings figures of eleven carriers. These showed an increase of 29.3 per cent in net operating income over July, although the decrease from August last year was 24.3 per cent.

The commodity markets presented a discouraging picture to those who had been hoping for brighter times. September wheat tumbled to 77⅞ cents against this year's previous minimum of 79¼ and closed only half a cent above the bottom for a net loss of 2 cents. Other futures showed similar declines on the day. Corn was off 1⅞ to 3 cents net and rye touched prices not seen since 1896. Active cotton months established new lows for the season, closing off 8 to 11 points, and raw sugar futures went to record lows.

If the ease of the money markets did not testify to the extremely slack demand for credit, both for speculative and business purposes, Wall Street would have been consoled by the appearance of a 1¼ per cent rate on call loans among "outside" lenders today. In addition, some brokers shaded time money rates; but funds still went begging.

German 5½s Decline.

Domestic bonds were firm. German 5½s, the recently floated international loan, firmed, contrasting with the Young Plan 7s which touched a new low. Apprehensions over the possibility of political difficulties in the Reich seemed to have been allayed, however, and it was suggested that perhaps Wall Street had been doing more worrying than had the Germans themselves.

Although stocks closed higher, nearly three score issues touched new lows during the session. Among them were Anaconda Copper, Kennecott, Andes Copper, Texas Corporation, Standard Oil of New York International Harvester Crucible Steel, Republic Steel and U. S. Rubber.

American Can stood out in the standard industrials, rising 5 points and retaining most of the advance. There were 4 point net gains in Underwood-Elliott-Fisher, Allied Chemical and American Water Works and advances of 3 or more in American Telephone, Auburn Auto, Du Pont and Case, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, Loew's, Fox, Johns-Manville, National Biscuit, Eastman Kodak, Houston Oil, Public Service of New Jersey and others improved 2 or more.

Foreign Exchanges were steadier and the German mark made a small recovery from yesterday's low.

FOREIGN BOND LIST CONTINUES TO SINK

24 German Issues Drop to New 1930 Lows; U. S. Governments Firm.

DOMESTIC GROUP RISES

New York, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—While the day's trading showed a continued strong demand for high grade domestic issues, the pressure exerted on foreign loans was again the feature of the bond market today.

There was a faint sign of stability in the list of German bonds in common with the better tone in other world markets, but most of them remained under pressure, and while showing some recovery from the lows of the day nearly two dozen issues closed at new bottoms for the year. Best support was attracted to German international 5½s, which finished three-quarters higher. But German 7s after rallying more than a point at the outset, skidded to a new low and its performance was duplicated by municipal and industrial issues on declines of from 1 to 4 points.

South Americans Weak.

There was some unsettlement in other continental European issues and in several South Americans Italian 7s sagged 1½ points, Italy Public Utility 7s lost 2 and Milan City 6½s 1½. Rome City 6½s reached a new low for the year. In the Latin-American group a half dozen Chilean issues dropped 1 to 2 points to reach 1930 lows and there were similar weak spots in Brazilian, Colombian and Peruvian issues.

Conditions remained favorable to the continued improvement of domestic corporation bonds, and some of the rail, utility and industrial issues made new high ground. Call money held at 2 per cent and some dealers quoted lower rates in some maturities of time paper.

American Telephone Rises.

Utilities were conspicuous in the advance. American Telephone debenture 5s and sinking fund 5s were among the issues at new highs. Others included Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania 5s C and New York & Richmond Gas 6s.

Canadian Pacific 5s reached a new high with an advance of more than a point. There was an active demand for St. Paul adjustment 5s, Rock Island 4s, which reached a new high on a large turnover, Big Four 4½s, Pennsylvania 4½s, Reading Co. 4½s and Southern Pacific 4s.

United States Governments were fairly steady. Treasury 4¼s yielded an eighth of a point. Liberty fourth 4¼s were well bought.

INVESTMENT GROUP CONVENTION PLANS

LOWER FARES ORDERED

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Local members of the Investment Bankers Association of America received instructions yesterday from its New York transportation committee regarding arrangements relative to the nineteenth annual convention of the association at New Orleans, October 12 to 15.

A special train of drawing room, compartment, observation, club, dining and baggage cars will leave New York, Friday, October 10, at 5:55 p. m., Eastern standard time, over the Pennsylvania railroad, and depart from this city at 11 p. m. over the Southern Railway System. Delegates will journey over the Norfolk & Western between Lynchburg and Roanoke, Va., and over the Southern Railway from Bristol for the remainder of the trip, arriving at New Orleans, Sunday, October 12, at 8:15 a. m.

There will be a three hour's stop-over at Chattanooga, Tenn., on the afternoon of October 11, during which an automobile sightseeing trip, visiting Lookout Mountain, has been arranged for delegates by the Chattanooga Clearing House Association.

To Use Certificate Plan.

The identification certificate plan has been adopted as the official form of ticket to be used in connection with the convention, the secretary's office furnishing each member house with the necessary number. These will entitle delegates to a round trip ticket to New Orleans at the rate of one and one-half fares, that from Washington being $60.30, exclusive of Pullman charges.

Pullman tickets only must be purchased from the New York transportation committee in accordance with forms received yesterday. Delegates must buy their own railroad tickets, presenting duly signed identification certificates at the local ticket office. They are cautioned to route them according to the foregoing railroad schedule.

The special train will make its return trip on October 15, leaving New Orleans at 8:30 p. m. and arriving in this city October 17, at 3:35 a. m. All railroad tickets purchased under the identification certificate plan must be validated at the convention transportation desk, Roosevelt Hotel, before starting on the return trip. Application for return Pullman reservations should be made at this desk on arrival.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Wheat, corn and every other grain today smashed down to record low prices that in some cases have been heretofore unequaled for 2½ years. Forced messages purporting to show that the Canadian growers' pool was insolvent, and that the grain would be taken over by Canadian government officials, were largely responsible. In spite of quick, authoritative denials that there was any truth to the reports, trade conditions remained demoralized, with Russia underselling North American wheat in Europe, and announced as having negotiated vessel charters to carry additional out-shipments of 55,000,000 bushels of Russian grain, mostly wheat.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous at only a fractional rally from the day's bottom figures and 1¾-2⅛ cents a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1¾-3 cents down, oats 1-1⅞ off and provisions unchanged to a setback of 30 cents.

There was no dispute but that wheat today was selling greatly below the cost of domestic production, the fact that for the first time ever known the United States visible supply total had piled up to more than 200,000,000 bushels did much to deter buying from the export market. Purchases for previous sellers who were in a position to collect a profit steadied values at times, but the support was too thin to be of a lasting nature as a rule. Acting as a further bearish influence was word that the world's stock of wheat in sight showed 27,322,000 bushels increase for the last week, and now amounted to 413,343,000 bushels, against 393,493,000 bushels a year ago.

Contributing to the acute weakness of wheat values in Chicago were sharp setbacks in quotations at Liverpool, accompanied by messages from Liverpool saying widespread belief prevailed that Russia would continue to force sales and to depress prices. There were also reports circulated that Russia was cancelling vessel freight room previously engaged to transport lumber, and would substitute wheat. On the other hand, a cheerful piece of news was that Canada had disposed of more than 1,000,000 bushels for export today, but a drawback was that none of the wheat had been bought for Europe, the destination being China.

Corn and oats tumbled with wheat, corn descending to a point where substitution of wheat for corn as live stock feed is no longer necessary, corn having gone 10 a discount under wheat.

Provisions went lower as a result of falling quotations both for cereals and hogs.

Curb Review

New York, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—A partial recovery from the low levels reached in the last selling movement was made by pivotal stocks on the curb market today.

The persistent selling that carried the list down sharply with few rallies for more than a week gave way to uncertainty at the outset. Trading turned dull on the rallies and prices moved sluggishly, with fluctuations confined to a point or less. Buyers showed more confidence in the final hour when the best prices of the day were reached and the market closed near the top. Total sales were 410,800 shares.

On a reduced volume of business, the utility group closed firm. Gains for the most part were fractional with only a few strong stocks, notably Electric Bond & Share, up 1¾, American & Foreign Power warrants, Middle West Utilities, Brazilian Traction, Associated Gas & Electric, Northern States Power A, and Electric Power Associates A, up 1 to 2 points. Associated Telephone & Telegraph A registered a new high for the year on a 11½-point rise.

Weak spots developed in the Petroleum group. Fresh selling depressed Standard of Kentucky, Gulf and Cosden &c new lows for the year on the movement, the latter closing at 25¼. A net loss of 2⅛. Other active oil shares were firm.

Such active shares as Translux, Technicolor, American Cynamid B, Safeway Store warrants, and Mead Johnson advanced. There were some sharp recessions among the industrials on thin selling. A. O. Smith Aluminum, Ltd., Continental Shovel preferred, General Tire & Rubber dropping several points. Principal changes in the motor and aviation groups showed divergent trends. Ford of Canada and Ford, Ltd., were up about a point each, and Fokker was ¾ higher. Western Air Express sagged 1¼.

Investment and holding company stocks were firm.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

B. C. G.—I am a stockholder in S. S. Kresge. How is the business of this company running at the present time?

Answer—Sales for August declined 12.2 per cent from the same month last year and it is indicated that profits in the third quarter, and possibly the fourth quarter, will compare unfavorably with the same periods of last year. Net income for the first six months of this year was equivalent to $1.19 a share on the common stock, as against $1.26 in the same time last year, while net earnings for the twelve months ended with June were equal to $2.68 a share. Kresge ranks second only to Woolworth in the 5 and 10 cent field. Dividends have been paid regularly at varying rates, the current distribution being $1.60 per annum. The stock may be considered a fair speculative investment holding.

United Fruit.

T. V. G.—Being a steady reader of your column, I am writing for an opinion of United Fruit.

Answer—It is conservatively estimated that United Fruit will earn about $6 a share this year. This would compare with $6.78 in 1929. The stock is now near the low point of the year and is selling to yield approximately 5 per cent from the $4 dividend, which is regarded as being safe.

American Smelting & Refining.

Answer—The company is expected to have no trouble this year in earning its $4 dividend. In fact, the dividend is likely to be amply covered. The company is the world's leading smelter and refiner of metals, and, being in strong financial shape, is better able to take care of dividend payments in a period of depression than many other companies in its line. The stock may be regarded as a speculative investment suitable for the long-term investor.

United Biscuit.

H. N. P.—I am a stockholder in United Biscuit. Please give me an idea of the earnings outlook.

Answer—Earnings so far this year are slightly ahead of those for last year, and it is expected that net income for 1929, which was equivalent to $4.39 a share, will be equaled in 1930. The company is in stronger shape than it was last year, the $500,000 outstanding bank loans at the end of 1929 having been paid off. Inventories of United Biscuit have been reduced and collections are somewhat better. Dividends are $1.60 a year and the stock may be regarded as attractive for long-term holding.

Utilities Power & Light.

V. M.—Please give me some facts on the "A" stock of Utilities Power & Light, particularly as to current earnings.

Answer—Net income, after all deductions, for the 12 months ended with June increased 36 per cent. After preferred dividends there was a balance available for the "A" stock equal to $4.97 a share, as against $4.46 for the previous 12-month period.

Dividends are $2 annually in cash, or, at the option of the holder, one-tenth of a share in class "A" stock. The company, which is a holding corporation, operates extensive public utility properties in the United States and abroad, through subsidiaries. In view of the fact that earnings for the year ended with June were nearly $3 a share above the cash dividend requirements, the stock may be considered as having some attraction as a speculative investment.

In making inquiries address Charles W. Storm, financial department of The Washington Post, and inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Sept. 23 (A.P.).—Cotton values continued to decline in today's market and again established new low records for the entire season, although further active trade buying offered considerable resistance and that gave the market a show of stability at times.

Continued favorable weather in the South and heavy hedge selling brought considerable pressure on the market, while the weakness in wheat and a number of the other commodity markets contributed to the downward movement of values. The Census Bureau figures on ginnings to September 16 of 3,729,682 bales were slightly smaller than generally expected and were partially instrumental in bringing about a midday rally. The new December position sold down to 10.77, closing at that price, with a net loss of 8 points, while the general market closed steady at 8 to 11 points net lower.

The opening was steady at 1 to 6 points lower in response to easier Liverpool cables and owing to the appearance of further Southern hedge selling, which seemed to encourage more general selling by local operators and commission houses. For a time the market was very active and offers were quite readily absorbed by the trade. This show of confidence and the ginning figures resulted in more or less covering as well as some reactionary buying, and during the midday session offers were less active. Toward the close renewed selling sent the market to the low of the day, new October contracts declining to 10.57 and March to 11.04, both these months closing at the extreme low level.

There was further October liquidation in progress, including the exchanging of interest from the near to distant positions, and there seemed to be some disposition to anticipate October notices on Thursday, which will be first notice day for that month. On the whole, the days' business was comprised largely of Southern selling and trade buying, and orders were so evenly divided that the market moved within narrow limits.

Liverpool cabled that the market there was lower under hedge selling and local and Bombay liquidation, and there was a moderate cloth business with South America and Africa while yarn stocks were decreasing. Exports today, 12,216, making 947,864 so far this season. Port receipts, 75,209. United States port stocks, 2,384,553.

MAJ. C. M. STEDMAN DIES AT AGE OF 89

HAD SUFFERED STROKE

Death early yesterday afternoon removed the lone surviving Civil War Veteran in Congress and possibly with one exception the oldest man to sit there in the person of Maj. Charles Manly Stedman, representative of the Fifth North Carolina District.

The aged legislator, lacking little more than four months of celebrating his ninetieth birthday, passed away at 2:18 o'clock at Mount Alto Hospital, which he entered on September 9 when he was stricken with apoplexy. With him at the end was his daughter, Mrs. Katherine Palmer, from his home town of Greensboro.

President Hoover at once sent to Mrs. Palmer the following message:

"I am grieved to learn of the death of your distinguished father, Congressman Charles M. Stedman, of North Carolina. He will be gratefully remembered for his high character and for his long and useful public service. I send you my deepest sympathy in your loss."

The ravages of the sudden stroke on a constitution weakened by extreme age and exhausted by enforced attention to his congressional duties allowed no hope for recovery. Growing constantly weaker, he took a turn for the worse Saturday. On Monday he went into a coma from which he failed to emerge, failing to recognize friends or attendants. The end had been expected momentarily.

By a singular whim of fate, he assumed his duties in the House at three score and ten years when man's alloted span of life, by a scriptural phrase, is done. He was successively returned by the Greensboro district, and prided himself on having never missed a day at his office during an ensuing session of the House.

With his strength slowly flagging, Maj. Stedman came to a realization early this year that the conservation of his declining health demanded a respite from even these trips to the Hill, and on his birthday on January 29 he announced that he would retire at the end of this term.

Due in large measure to his ebbing health, the House omitted on this last birthday a formal recognition of the event, and his colleagues tendered him their felicitations in private. A year earlier the House members had taken formal cognizance of the anniversary by standing for several minutes and roundly applauding him. Upon his eighty-fifth birthday, the House accorded him the exceptional honor of suspending its proceedings to allow each member to file past and shake his hand.

Upon the death last November of Senator Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming, his junior in age and the last Union veteran in Congress, Maj. Stedman became the lone Civil War veteran. A real major of the Confederacy, he surrendered with Lee at Appomattox. To many this gray-haired survivor of the lost cause bore a striking resemblance to his war time leader. An unusually warm friendship existed between Maj. Stedman and Senator Warren, and the two often spent hours together reminiscing.

With the exception only of "Uncle Joe" Cannon, of Illinois, whose death occurred in 1926 at the age of 90 years, Maj. Stedman was regarded as the oldest man ever to have served in Congress.

It was on his last birthday celebration in the House that "the major" gave his own prescription for longevity. Frequent baths each day keeps the doctor away, he declared, admitting that he sometimes took three baths a day, aside from washing his face and hands at least ten times daily. He was an inveterate smoker, he was not a prohibitionist, and, during his lengthy House service, he was not sick a day. He was a great lover of birds, and, because of his belief that the bluebird was an omen of good luck, was often humorously called "the bluebird" by his intimates. His Confederate comrades often recounted that his oft-given prediction of Confederate success in battle invariably followed the singing of a bluebird. He was a profound student of history and a great admirer of Napoleon, continuing to read extensively, always without glasses, until his last confinement.

Until his death he was an ardent exponent of States' rights.

Born at Pittsboro, N. C., he was a member of the graduating class at the University of North Carolina when the Civil War broke out. So eager was he to enlist that he forsook commencement exercises immediately upon receiving his diploma, and enlisted as a private in the Fayetteville Light Infantry, North Carolina's first regiment in the war. He campaigned under both Lee and Jackson, being thrice wounded.

After the conflict he resumed his studies, and in two years began the practice of law at Greensboro. Shortly after his marriage in 1866 he moved to his wife's home in Wilmington, N. C., and formed a law partnership. He served in 1880 as a delegate to the Democratic national convention and four years later was elected lieutenant governor. Upon the completion of that term, he was defeated for the governorship by a small vote in a spirited campaign.

He established permanent residence in Greensboro in 1898 in opening law offices. He served one term as president of the North Carolina Bar Association and also as president of the North Carolina Railroad Co.

His passing occasioned widespread regret yesterday, particularly in North Carolina, where Gov. O. Max Gardner led in paying tribute to Maj. Stedman.

"Few men have rendered as distinguished service to State and country as he," declared Gov. Gardner.

Associated Press dispatches from Winston-Salem said that his surviving North Carolina comrades of the Civil War assembling there for their annual convention received the news of his death with extreme sadness.

Funeral services will be held at his old home in Fayetteville at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, with members of his old military organization, the Fayette Light Infantry, serving at their request as a guard of honor.

A congressional committee named to attend the rites included Senator Robinson, of Indiana; Representative Cannon, of Missouri; Representative Speaker, of Ohio; Representative Collier, of Mississippi; Representative Curry, of California; Representative Thatcher, of Kentucky; and all members of the North Carolina delegation in Congress.

Jealous Wife Is Held On Count of Murder

Charge Is Ordered After Younger Rival Dies in Hospital.

She didn't mean to shoot anybody, she only wanted to frighten them, pleaded Mrs. Gamble in confessing her part in the scene which was enacted when her husband, who is seven years her junior, returned to the vicinity of his home with Mrs. Davis, after an automobile ride which lasted into the early morning hours.

"I've got you now; right is right and wrong is wrong," screamed the outraged wife as she fired the fatal shot. Her two small sons were standing by her side at the time.

While the wounded woman lay unconscious in the hospital, her bedside was visited by her husband, a convict, serving a sentence in a Virginia road camp at Petersburg, Va., for a violation of the prohibition law. He came under guard and remained several hours until it became apparent that there was no hope his wife would rally to recognize him.

Mrs. Gamble had been at liberty since the shooting. She was under $500 bond on a charge of assault. She told Justice Walter H. Gray that she warned the Davis woman to stay away from her husband. On the night of the shooting, she said, Gamble drove away in his automobile with Mrs. Davis betwen 8 and 9 o'clock.

SMITH FIRM NAMED DEFENDANT IN SUIT

Bondholders' Committee Requests Receivership and Accounting.

FAIRFAX HOTEL INVOLVED

Another suit against the F. H. Smith Co. and its subsidiary corporations was filed yesterday in District Supreme Court by the bondholders' protective committee of the company.

As in most of the suits filed against the Smith company and its subsidiary organization and former officials the defendants ask appointment of a receiver, an accounting and an injunction.

In the latest suit the defendants named are: Federal Capital Hotel Co. of 2100 Massachusetts avenue northwest; Maddux Hotel, Inc.; Henry C. Maddux, the American Security & Trust Co., the F. H. Smith Co., Charles H. Wiltsie, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, Inc. The American Security & Trust Co. recently was made substitute trustee for the Fairfax Apartment, which is involved in the litigation.

It is pointed out in the suit that while the property has been supposed to be under the control of Maddux, in reality the Smith company has been in actual charge. It is set out that taxes have not been paid and that in January, 1930, Wiltsie bought the property because of tax default. Principal and interest payments on some of the mortgage bonds also are in default, it is alleged.

In the prayer the petitioners ask that Maddux and the Maddux Hotels, Inc., be restrained from paying any money to the Smith Co., to appoint a receiver for the property and to compel a full accounting of funds now in the hands of the Federal Capital Hotel Co., Maddux, the Maddux Hotels, Inc., and the Smith Co.

Hearing on a number of pleas in abatement and motions to criminal indictments involving former Smith Co. officials and directors is scheduled for tomorrow. Trial of the charges has been set for October 8. Nugent Dodds, special assistant to the Attorney General, will prosecute, with the assistance of Assistant United States Attorney Neil Burkinshaw.

Myer Cohen, prominent Washington attorney and insurance man, made $250 bequests to each of fourteen charitable and religious organizations, according to the terms of his will filed yesterday in District Supreme Court. No estimate of the value of the estate is revealed.

Institutions receiving bequests are: The Christian and Eleanor Ruppert Home, the German Orphan Asylum Association, Children's Hospital, Young Men's Christian Association, Jewish Community Center, Young Women's Christian Association, Emergency Hospital, Little Sisters of the Poor, Salvation Army, the House of the Good Shepherd and the Hebrew Home for the Aged, all of the District of Columbia, and the Hebrew Orphans' Home, at Atlanta, Ga.; the Jewish Publication Society, at Philadelphia, Pa., and the Union American Hebrew Congregations, of Cincinnati, Ohio. A trust fund of $300 is left to the Washington Hebrew Congregation on the condition that the family burial plot be cared for in perpetuity.

Fisher to Address Club.

Frederick V. Fisher, director of the Washington Bicentennial Celebration in 1932, will address the Soroptomist Clulbl today at 1 o'clock at the Lafayette Hotel, where he will outline a plan of procedure for "service" clubs of the District in the celebration. More than 100 members and guests are expected to be present.

CITY HEADS MODIFY PENSION PAYMENTS

Retired Firemen Who Have Reached 55 Years Not to Be Examined.

POLICE ALSO AFFECTED

egulations governing payment of increased pensions to pensioners of the police and fire departments were modified somewhat by the District Commissioners yesterday.

Pensioners who have reached the age of 55 years or more will not be required to undergo a new physical disability examination, the Commissioners decided.

This action was taken on recommendation of William W. Bride, corporation counsel, to whom the question had been referred by the Commissioners because of the legal technicalities which seemed to be involved.

Because of the wording of the law and the discussions between members of Congress and District representatives prior to passage of the increased pay bill for the two departments, the Commissioners proceeded cautiously in framing the decision on the treatment of pensioners. They were fearful that some members of Congress might feel that they simply ordered a blanket increase in pensions and seek to punish the District in some way because of that feeling.

The rule adopted by the Commissioners yesterday is the same as that which was set forth in the Commissioners' order of July 12, 1929.

The way the matter now stands, all persons retired because of age and length of service will receive an increase in pensions commensurate with the increase in pay for their rank provided in the new salary law.

Persons retired because of physical disability who have reached the age of 55 years since retirement also will receive the proportionate increase.

Those retired because of physical disability but who have not reached 55 years of age will be given a new physical examination to determine the present extent of their disability and their cases will be dealt with individually.

Apartments House 50 Per Cent of City

Zoning Engineer's Survey Reveals Demand for Residence Space.

Fifty per cent of Washington's residents live in apartment houses, S. G. Lindholm, engineer of the District Zoning Commission, declared in a survey of zoning in Washington made public yesterday.

Twenty-six per cent of the city's population is housed in row houses, he said. This is in marked contrast to the situation a few years ago, Mr. Lindholm said, pointing out that when the zoning commission was created in September, 1920, row houses were the abode of 50 per cent of the city's population.

The swing has been away from row houses and apartment houses and the demand has been for more space about residences, the survey said. Mr. Lindholm declared that there is now available in the District all of the commercial area which can be used, but that as the city grows there will be an increasing demand for residential areas which must be met by cutting into commercial territory unless persons are to be forced outside the District to find homes before the city's population has reached the point where the area inside the District line is filled.

Tank Hesitates on Avenue; Not Lost, But Musses Things

Because the driver of an Army tank got his instructions crossed Monday afternoon, the District highway department was busy yesterday repairing Pennsylvania avenue in front of the District Building, where the tank stopped and turned, to the distress of the avenue asphalt.

Officers of the Army War College had been careful to get permission of District highway officials to drive a tank up Pennsylvania avenue to advertise the forthcoming spectacle which the officers of the Army in the District and their ladies are to stage for the benefit of the Army relief fund for enlisted men.

The tank was of smooth tread and everything else was all right and would have continued so had not the operator stopped, turned and started up again on the soft asphalt roadway of the avenue. That was too much for the soft payment and highway officials yesterday ordered the roadway repaired by the surface heating method to smooth it out once more. Meantime Army officers were apologizing and District officials remembered the charitable purpose back of the tank's journey and said it was all right.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR DISTRICT MAN

Zoning Head Says Property Owner Has Broken Arlington Law.

ROTARY CLUB TO MEET

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Determined to see that the provisions of the Arlington County zoning ordinance which has been approved and adopted by the county board of supervisors is enforced, Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth at the request of the zoning administrative officer, Robert H. Forman, issued another warrant against Max Bregman, of Washington, for alleged violation of the county zoning ordinance yesterday.

"Bregman has maintained what I term," stated Mr. Forman, as "a storage property yard for building material on his property located on Wilson boulevard and Arlington avenue in the heart of the residential section in direct violation of the zoning ordinance.

"Every effort has been made by the courts and otherwise to get him to either build, as he declared was his intention, or to move the material which has been piled on the lot for several months."

The records of the police show that on June 28 Bregman was fined for violation of the zoning ordinance the sum of $34.25 including costs. On July 8 an appeal was noted and bond in the sum of $100 was given with Bryan Gordon as surety.

The records further show that on July 30 the case was again in court and continued until the next day. At that time the case was dismissed by Police Judge Harry R. Thomas.

Mr. Forman stated last night that the reason the case on July 31 was dismissed was due to the fact that Bregman had at all times contended that he was going to build an $8,000 apartment house and that he was granted a permit for the building on July 21. This permit expired September 21 and still no signs of any building are in evidence.

Scattered returns from civic federation workers, 50 to 100 in number, who are circulating the petition requesting the calling of an election on the question of a change in the form of county government, indicate that the number of signers already obtained is greatly in excess of the 200 required by the law, according to a statement last night by Robert N. Anderson, chairman of the committee in charge of the campaign.

Mr. Anderson announced that all the workers have been requested to make definite reports to their local chairman not later than 7 o'clock tonight and the number of signers from the various communities will be announced to the public through the press tomorrow. The committee is confident of obtaining a grand total of more than 1,000 signatures by the time the petition is presented to Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy on Wednesday, October 1.

Consideration of the recommendation of the legislation and legal action committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation for the county manager form of government for the county, which has been adopted by the federation, will be the principal business to come before the fall meeting of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County to be held this afternoon at the Calvary Methodist Protestant Church at Aurora Hills, according to the president, Mrs. Ruby Simpson, in a statement given out last night.

Robert N. Anderson, chairman of the federation committee, will address the meeting, read the committee's report and discuss the entire subject covering other forms of government which are available.

The meeting will be preceded by a luncheon served in the church promptly at 12:30 o'clock.

An elaborate program has been arranged to greet Frank T. McFaden, of Winchester, Va., grand master of Masons in Virginia, who with C. B. Laycock, of Arlington County, district deputy grand master, will on Saturday pay an official visit to Columbia Lodge, No. 285, A. F. and A. M., in the Masonic Temple at Clarendon.

An invitation has been extended to all Masonic lodges within District 54. The master mason's degree will be conferred.

In an effort to relieve a most serious condition now existing in the vicinity of Falls Church as a result of the continued drought, J. V. Turner, of East Falls Church, visited the office of the Arlington County water department yesterday, where he filed an application for an extension of the water mains along Brown avenue for a distance of 546 feet and along A street for 454 feet.

Not having the required 50 per cent of the frontage for the laying of the main signed up by the property owners, which the board of supervisors are requiring before they will approve the laying of any more mains, Mr. Turner says that he hopes to have the required number of signers to the application by the time the board holds another meeting. The next meeting of the board will be held Tuesday, September 30.

The proposal of the Arlington County Civic Federation to change the form of the county government will be the principal topic for consideration at the meeting of the Lyon Village Citizens Association to be held tonight at the home of I. C. Buchanan, 100 North Spruce street. Members of the legislation and legal action committee of the federation, which for many months made a study of the forms of government available to the county and recommended the county manager, and who have been designated to arrange for the election on the question and carry on the campaign, will address the meeting.

Mrs. Mary Moore McIntosh, registrar for Arlington Precinct, announced last night that she will be at the Arlington Firehouse Saturday, October 4, to register all persons qualified to vote at the November election.

Persons wishing to register have been requested to bring with them all necessary poll tax receipts.

The Arlington Rotary Club will meet tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock at the Washington Golf and Country Club. A. F. Thelander will preside.

The Clarendon Rebekah Lodge, No. 28, will give another one of its benefit luncheons today at the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon from 12 to 2 o'clock. Mrs. Martha McFall is the chairman in charge of the arrangements.

The Ballston Council, No. 221, Junior Order United American Mechanics, will meet tonight in the Ballston Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Patrick Henry School at Arlington will hold its first meeting of the school year Friday night at the schoolhouse at 8 o'clock. The newly elected president, Mrs. F. M. Coakley, will preside.

Plans will be made for the holding of a reception to the teachers and a program of activity for the year.

The American Legion Auxiliary Unit, No. 139, will meet tonight in the rooms of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce at Clarendon.

Attacking the action of the County Board of Supervisors in widening the Wilson boulevard at Clarendon and failing to recognize their promise to the Ballston Citizens Association more than a year ago to provide storm sewers, the association, at its meeting last night, voted to send a committee to attend the next meeting of the board to be held Tuesday and demand that action be taken and that storm sewers as promised be provided for the town of Ballston.

President Grover E. Payne pointed out that approximately $8,000 was provided for the construction of storm sewers more than a year ago, but that the funds were used in the rebuilding of Wilson boulevard.

The committee that will appear before the board for the association will be composed of Mrs. Catherine M. Rogers, Thomas J. Crack and Ray Cogswell.

The association went on record as indorsing the county manager form of government for the county which is being sponsored by the Arlington County Civic Federation.

With more than 150 members of Monarch clubs from Martinsburg, W. Va.; Richmond, Baltimore and Washington attending a banquet at the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse, "Monarch night" in Arlington County prevailed last night.

The visiting members were welcomed in a lengthy address by the president of the local club, A. B. Honts. Walter U. Varney, past president, acted as toastmaster.

The program of entertainment included a number of solos by G. F. D. Rollings, piano selections by Miss Grace Bruns, selections by the quartet from the Martinsburg club and recitations by Mrs. Bryan Gordon.

Concluding the musical program, the remainder of the evening was enjoyed with cards and dancing until midnight.

Indorsement of the county manager plan of government for Arlington County and the election of the county board of five members at large was unanimous at a mass meeting of the citizens of Lyon Park held in the Community House last night.

Addressing the meeting, Hugh McGrath, member of the committee from the Arlington Civic Federation, who for many months made a study of the subject and recently filed its report with the federation recommending the county manager plan, which was adopted, outlined the advantages and disadvantages of the various forms of government available and stated that after considerable discussion the committee came to the conclusion that the county manager was the most suitable form to meet the needs of Arlington County.

Mr. McGrath pointed out that one of the most outstanding advantages of the proposed change was that it will abolish the present three magisterial districts and the county will be treated as a unit.

PHILADELPHIA ASKS DIAMOND TO LEAVE

CAPITAL VISIT DELAYED

New York, Sept. 23 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—John T. Diamond, prominent New York cereal beverage distributor, returned from Philadelphia, his home town, this afternoon, concluding an international tour of inspection of the latest developments in jail facilities. "Legs" departed from Philadelphia abruptly. His desire to get out of the place was exceeded only by the desire of the city fathers to see him go.

They gave him an hour to take himself outside the city limits and Diamond cheerfully obliged, pointing out with perfect truth that he would have gladly shaken the Philadelphia dust from his feet the day before, if police hadn't locked him up for no visible reason.

They had seized his person with great pomp and ceremony Monday afternoon as he stepped off the boat that brought him from Germany and charged him with being a suspicious character. At a hearing in Police Court today detectives who had made the arrest blandly told the magistrate that they wished the charge dismissed.

"Legs" was asked if he would leave town if released.

"I certainly will," he assured the court. Whereupon the charge was dismissed.

Rumor had it that Diamond was to come to Washington from Philadelphia, ostensibly for the purpose of airing his troubles before a Federal official or body. When asked what kind of a reception he would be given should he come here, Inspector William S. Shelby declared he would not be molested.

Rudolph Resigns Bicentennial Job

Press of Work Is Given as Reason for Quitting Celebration Post.

Former District Commissioner Cuno H. Rudolph yesterday tendered the District Commissioners his resignation as chairman of the District of Columbia Commission on the George Washington bicentennial celebration.

The work of the commission, Mr. Rudolph said, "has progressed to a point where it becomes imperative that the head of the commission be in direct contact with the work at all times. Owing to my frequent and often prolonged absence from Washington I am unable to fulfill the requirements of the office any longer and beg to tender my resignation as chairman, which, I trust, you may find convenient to accept at an early date."

Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, who has been vice chairman of the commission, will act as chairman of the commission, the Commissioners said in announcing Mr. Rudolph's resignation. The vacancy caused by Mr. Rudolph's resignation will not be filled, it was decided, and if other vacancies occur the District Commissioners will confer with the membership of the committee before filling them.

GIRL SEEKS TO END ROMANCE IN COURT

Marriage, Which Lasted for One Night, Undertaken Under Threats.

ANNULLMENT IS SOUGHT

A romance that began, blossomed and ended all within one month was revealed yesterday when Mrs. Roudella M. Washburn, 18-year-old high school student, through her next friend, Mrs. Cora M. Coon, of Tenth street southwest near Fifth street, petitioned the District Supreme Court to annul her marriage to Mellon O. Washburn.

Washburn, the girl states, deserted her the day after their midnight marriage at Rockville, Md., telling her that she would have to "look out for herself" as he was not going to support her.

The girl declares that on August 22, almost a month after she met Washburn, she accepted his invitation to accompany him on an automobile ride. On a lonely road, she asserts, he proposed and acted in such a manner that she feared she would suffer violence if she refused.

So, she says, they went to Rockville where a license was obtained and the ceremony performed. Then they rode to Philadelphia where they remained for the rest of the night. The next day Washburn brought her back to the District and left her. Since then, she avows, she has not seen the man.

Mrs. Washburn tells the court that at the time of the marriage she was only 17 years old, and that under the law, the license was invalid. She states that she gave her age as 18 but that she did so only because of the defendant's influence. She also states that she was married without the consent of her parents, and in addition to seeking an annulment wants her maiden name, Roudella M. Sparshott, restored.

Husband Lists Man In Divorce Action

Employe of Cosmos Club, in Reply to Wife's Suit, Asks Custody of Child.

Edward F. Crookshanks, an employe of the Cosmos Club, who recently was sued for limited divorce by his wife, Velma F. Crookshanks, a telephone operator at a local hotel residing on F street northwest near Twenty-first street, has answered by filing a cross-bill for absolute divorce in which he names a corespondent.

Crookshanks tell the court that his wife has kept company with several men during their marriage and alleges improper relations with at least one man other than the corespondent. The couple was married April 11, 1927, and have one child.

Mrs. Crookshanks, in her petition, charged her husband with giving wild liquor parties against her wishes. She asked for alimony and custody of the child. Crookshanks, in his bill, declares his wife is not "a fit and proper person to have custody of the child" and asks that he be awarded his custody. Attorneys Robert C. Handwork and Lawrence P. Mattingly appear for the husband, while George M. Wilmeth and Burr Tracy Ansell represent the wife.

CHAMBER'S DRIVE PLANS UNDER WAY

Expansion Program of Five Years to Be Launched Soon in Capital.

JOSE NAMED CHAIRMAN

Members of the Washington Chamber of Commerce are nearly ready to launch a five-year expansion program to extend and broaden the scope of the civic and business activities of the organization. Preparations for the campaign have been in progress for several weeks under the supervision of a special committee.

This committee, in planning the campaign, has been motivated by the belief that the Chamber of Commerce has not been accorded the membership and financial support that similar organizations receive in cities even of smaller population. The committee also complains that "the people of Washington, especially the business groups, have not fully appreciated the need for aggressive cooperation in furthering the civic and commercial interests of the District."

Objectives of Campaign.

The following objectives are sought in the campaign:

(a) To make the Chamber of Commerce comparable in strength, influence and community usefulness with the strongest chambers of commerce in the country.

(b) To modernize where necessary its organization structure and its methods of operating, and especially to afford an opportunity for widespread group and committee service.

(c) To make it an organization in which the views of the members can be quickly crystallized on matters where a united front of all local groups is desired.

(d) To broaden the work of the organiaztion so that it will render essential services to various general groups, such as the Chamber of Commerce of other cities do in upbuilding trade, commerce and industry.

Leese Aiding in Work.

Martin A. Leese, past president of the Chamber, has accepted the chairmanship of a special division, composed of 60 members, which will be in charge of the solicitation of plural memberships from Washington's leading business firms.

The personnel of the comimttee on the five year expansion program follows:

Rudolph Jose, Chairman, R. P. Andrew, Darrell P. Aub, Walter C. Balderston, Charles T. Clagett, Charles W. Darr, John A. Eckert, Charles H. Frame, George E. Keneipp, Harry King, Martin A. Leese, Charles H. Le Fevre, Thomas P. Littlepage, E. D. Merrill, Elwood Street, Arthur J. Sundlun, Stephen H. Talkes and John Z. Walker.

SPECULATION RIFE ON HOOVER TALKS

Forthcoming Four Speeches May Make or Break Him and Party, One View.

IN CLEVELAND ON OCT. 2

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

President Hoover's forthcoming four speeches are being looked to in business and political circles with as much concern as his acceptance address two years ago.

Already business scouts are in town trying to pick up what information they can about what he will say, and in Republican circles the hope is being freely expressed that the speeches will mark the turning of the tide.

A rumor has apparently gotten around in railroad circles that he is to take a particularly strong stand toward railroad consolidation presumably in his Cleveland speech, October 2, and whether there is anything to the rumor or not some apprehension has been caused in some quarter that he may go so far as to come out for compulsory consolidation.

In Favor of Consolidation.

The President is already committed to consolidation, it is pointed out, and in these apprehensive quarters there is a feeling, whether justified or not, that he is getting rather impatient of the progress being made toward voluntary realignments. The belief is that he looks upon the working out of this question as important in his so-called hand-to-mouth buying plan.

He is known to consider this plan as important in the prevention of unemployment and depression cycles. These cycles are quite obviously caused in his opinion by the practice of merchants stocking up their shelves for far advanced consuming needs and the similar practice of manufacturers turning out their output without any regard to the consuming capacity of the buyers.

It was necessary in other days before the country's transportation facilities were developed to their present point for merchants to stock up in anticipation of distant needs, it is pointed out, but the President is of the belief that there is no reason why this should be done now.

May Outline Remedies.

With the transportation system developed as it is, it is his belief that there is no reason why manufacturers and merchants should not keep their stock adjusted to the public's buying capacity.

Whether he is prepared to push for the readjustment of the rail systems at this time in furtherance of this view is, of course, not known. In those quarters where there is apprehension that this is his intention it is held that the present unsettled conditions call for a noninterference policy, that the time is inopportune for any readjustment of the rail systems with subsequent economies that might affect labor.

The significant thing seems to be that the President is expected to outline in his four speeches the definite remedies that he has had in mind for the slough in which the whole world has found itself, and to set them forth in such a convincing way as to appeal to the voters that instead of changing horses now in midstream, that the Republicans are the ones to lead them out of the darkness.

Much at Stake.

As one prominent Republican leader has expressed it, the four speeches may "make or break the President and the party along with him."

Among the Republican leaders who are dealing in facts instead of fantasy the seriousness of things political and economic is frankly admitted.

Senator Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee, has found, it is understood, in his travels and in correspondence, that there is a disappointment that the public works projects which were to relieve unemployment, are not getting under way as fast as had been expected. There is no appreciation among these people, it is pointed out, of the planning and other groundwork that is necessary before actual works can be commenced. Progress, of course, is being made.

See Exports Decreasing.

Republican leaders see, too, an unfortunate trend of the country's foreign trade. They put no stock in Democratic claims that the tariff will cut down imports. Rather, they believe imports will continued to show an increase from now on, and for the reason that this country's buying power is being restored. Tariff revenues will consequently be increased.

But on the other hand, they see the exports decreasing, not because of the tariff, but because of the low buying power of foreign countries. This, aside from making for an unfavorable trade balance, augurs badly for the country's main problem at present—its tremendous surplus.

They realize, too, that the Republicans' stock and trade, their principal appeal, has been their providing of work for the laboring man. As Senator Fess has put it, it is naturally embarrassing, politically, when this work does not exist.

Position of President.

The irony of the whole situation, one Republican leader pointed out, is that Mr. Hoover is one man who for eight years as Secretary of Commerce gave a study to just such conditions as are now existing and of ways of dealing with and preventing them. Yet they developed, swept upon him suddenly, before he could get settled in the White House.

Ever since he has been there he has been on the defensive or engaged in setting up emergency measures, with no time to devote to effecting his long-studied economic theories.

It is because of this situation that they have high hopes for the effectiveness of his forthcoming four speeches. They hope he will be able to put them over as if he were stepping entirely out of the darkness of the last two years, not as a defense of the time he has already been in.

The thought they want to get over is that "we are starting all over now."

Court Holds Three Men In Gas Filling Robbery

Charged with housebreaking, three Negroes were arraigned in Police Court yesterday in connection with the forced entry into the filling station at Nineteenth and E streets northwest and were ordered held for action of the grand jury under bonds of $1,000 each.

The Negroes are Albert Beasley, Earl Todd and Julius Joel. At the same time Beasley was sentenced by Judge Gus A. Schuldt to spend 60 days in jail on a charge of stealing clothing and other articles from automobiles parked at Lincoln Memorial.
